GERMANY PERMITS MASSACRE BY TURKS

EARLY CLOSING ENDED

EXPLODING LAUNDRY BOILER KILLS 3

Four Others Injured In Accident That Wrecks Providence Plant

Providence, March 4.—Three men were killed and four seriously injured by the explosion of the boiler in the Mount Pleasant Wet Wash Laundry Company at No. 115 Pomona avenue today.

THE DEAD.

William Lanou, aged fifty-two.

Frank Cormier, aged twenty-eight.

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Joseph McGrath, aged twenty-three.

Maurice McGrath, aged twenty-three.

William Moore, aged forty.

William Simmoneau, aged sixteen.

Cormier was a resident of Esmond. The other victims lived near the laundry. LaPlante lived at No. 43 Grant street. The McGrath brothers reside at No. 177 Union street, Moore at No. 41 Chaffee street and Simmoneau at No. 64 Steuben street.

The explosion occurred while the men were preparing for the day's work. Lanou, who is one of the proprietors of the concern, was fixing the boiler at the time. His body, as well as that of Cormier and Laplante, was blown across the long room against the wall. Death was instantaneous.

The police believe that Lanou went to work upon the boiler early today in an effort to force the steam, which was apparently at low ebb during Sunday. While trying to do this the boiler exploded.

The force of the explosion was heard for blocks. Windows in a radius of thirty to fifty yards were blown out and intense excitement prevailed in the Mount Pleasant section of the city.

WOMEN CARD PLAYERS SCORED BY CONVERT

New York, March 4.—A Billy Sunday convert, Frank Goodman, former gambler, denounced women card players in an address yesterday at the Y. W. C. A. in his crusade against gambling. "Card playing in the home," he said, "provides 75 per cent. of the raw material which eventually makes up the gambling underworld. If Christian men and women would eliminate cards from their homes, the gambling dens of our cities would come close to perishing from lack of patronage.

4 OVERCOME BY COAL GAS AT MANCHESTER

Manchester, N. H., March 4.—Three women and a man were found unconscious from coal gas in a house on C street today. They were Edward Tinkham, Mrs. Bertha Booth, Mrs. Harry Ackland and Mrs. Joseph Fitzsimmons. The women come from Canada. Mrs. Thomas Cunningham, who lives in the same house, smelled the gas. She summoned physicians, who revived Tinkham and the women with pulmotors.

CARS CRASH IN SUBWAY; TIE UP TRAFFIC

Passengers, Shaken Up and Bruised, Transfer to Other Loops.

Several persons were shaken up and bruised when a Jamaica Plain car and the trailer of a Beacon street-Reservoir car were in collision a few yards south of the Boylston street station in the subway today.

Southbound traffic through the subway was tied up more than half an hour. Passengers on many of the cars were compelled to walk back through the subway to Boylston station.

The force of the collision derailed the Beacon street trailer car. The lights in the trailer were out. About a dozen passengers were in the trailer. Several were thrown from their seats and slightly bruised.

A long line of cars became stalled on the subway tracks from Park street to the point where the collision occurred, just beyond the Boylston street station on the outbound track. Incoming subway cars were diverted to the outside loop to Park street and thence through the Tremont street subway.

The passengers on the derailed trailer transferred to the leader car, which was detached from the trailer and proceeded. The Jamaica Plain car passengers and those on cars directly behind got off and walked back to Boylston station.

An emergency crew was summoned and put the trailer back on the tracks with lifting jacks.

McCALL'S PLEA FOR 'L' SCORED BY LABOR

Move for Increased Fare Stirs Union Men; May Appeal to People

Labor men today denounced Governor McCall for his action urging the suspension of the five-cent fare on the Elevated. The Boston Central Labor Union adopted a resolution protesting against such suspension.

They declared the Governor's request to the Legislature to be uncalled for and un-American. It was also stated that if necessary the Central Labor Union would go to the people direct and ask them to demand that no action be taken before public hearings are held.

"SANDBAGGING" METHODS.

President Edward F. McGrady of the Boston Central Labor Union, who presented the resolution, criticized Governor McCall for his request to the Legislature. He declared also that the Elevated was trying to "sandbag" the public into giving it a six-cent fare, and that its service was the poorest furnished by any street railway in America.

Siberian Railway Bridges Destroyed; Japan Ready to Act

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, March 4.—Russians have destroyed some of the bridges along the Siberian Railway near Chita, according to a despatch received by the State Department. The message gave no details and simply transmitted reports which had reached Yokohama, where members of the American Railway Mission who recently visited Russia now are.

The department maintained its decision not to discuss the Russian situation. Officials declined pointblank to comment on developments there, or even to admit that any additional information concerning what was transpiring there had been received.

Routine messages have been received from Moscow and from the Norwegian vice-consul, who has taken over the affairs of the United States in Petrograd, but officials said they contained "nothing of interest to the general public."

OFFICIALS ARE SILENT.

Although it has been persistently reported that a final and complete agreement on the question of Japanese action in the far east had been reached, officials would not confirm it.

At the Japanese embassy it was explained that in the absence of the newly appointed ambassador, who has not yet reached Washington, no one was able to discuss the situation in any way.

Senators and Representatives and expected that President Wilson would visit the Capitol to address a joint session. Until the President believes the time ripe to take the country into his confidence, discussion of the Siberian possibilities growing out of the complete Russian collapse must be only speculation.

JAPAN ACTS FIRST.

An agreement on Japan's course of action now is believed to have been reached. As it involved a military problem, officials said today that it was unlikely that any announcement in advance of action would be made. As a matter of fact that is hardly Japan's way. In the past she has acted first and explained afterward.

Officials have made it very plain, however, that there is a complete unity among all of Germany's enemies as to the part which Japan shall play in the latest developments. They also explain that the development of complete plan of action de-

ROBERT P. BAYARD, JR., the first Dedham soldier who sacrificed his life that the world might be safe for democracy.

"I would like to join the United States Army and go to France to avenge his death," said one of the brothers of Robert R. Bayard, Jr., of No. 24 Dale street, Dedham.

Robert is the first Dedham man to lay down his life in the war.

The brother has two young children, now motherless, to support. "If it were not for them I would go," he said.

A telegram has been received stating that Robert died from head wounds. He enlisted in Company B, 5th Massachusetts Regiment, last Summer before the regiment went to camp.

There are three stars in the service flag hanging in a window of the Bayard home. One is for another son, Donald, of the Field Artillery, and another for Harold C. Searle, chief electrician in the Naval Reserve and son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Bayard.

"We Are Going to Win," Says Gen. March

By GEORGE GARVIN,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, March 4.—"We are in this thing and we are going to win. In saying that I do not underestimate the strength of the German military machine. It is powerful, very powerful. Notwithstanding that fact, we are going to win."

This was the big, outstanding, confident declaration made today by Major General Peyton C. March, the new chief of the general staff. He formally assumed command of the office as successor to General Tasker H. Bliss, now on duty with the supreme war council at Versailles, and took a few minutes from his series of conferences to pay tribute to the American soldier and his allied comrades.

U.S. TROOPS KILLED BY SHELL

Many Also Wounded When Germans Score a Direct Hit

By HENRY G. WALES.

Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

With the American Army in France, March 4.—Several Americans were killed and several were wounded by shell fragments when the Germans scored a direct hit on a half-ruined house in a certain village just behind the American lines.

One of the German prisoners captured by the Americans in the fight north of Toul on Friday morning and who subsequently died of his wounds, was buried in the same cemetery with some of the American dead.

The number of prisoners in the Americans' hands was increased to four when a wounded German was found lying in a shell hole in "No Man's Land," near the American entanglements.

The man's groans attracted the attention of the Americans, but they were prevented from bringing him in, by machine-gun fire, until after darkness had fallen.

Since the German rout, the artillery activity has increased and the American lines have been heavily shelled.

TRAIN SERVICE TO CHICAGO IS CUT HARD

Only 9 Instead of 15 Between There and St. Louis, but Interchangeable

By International News Service.

Washington, March 4.—Railways Director McAdoo today approved recommendations of Regional Director R. H. Aishton for a rearrangement of the passenger train service between Chicago and St. Louis, Mo. There are now fifteen trains a day between the two cities, and the number will be cut to nine.

Tickets will be made interchangeable, however, affording the traveling public, in the opinion of the railway administration, increased train facilities.

The change will effect a saving of 15,706 miles run per month and an estimated saving in coal of 9,530 tons for the same period.

The change is believed to be the forerunner of others along the same line to be recommended by various regional directors.

U. S. Army Ready for Big Clash, Reports War Secretary

By International News Service.

Washington, March 4.—The momentum of battle is increasing in the western theatre of war, Secretary of War Baker declared in his weekly review of the war made public today. He warns in plain language that the quiet conditions of the past three months have come to an end. Here are some of his salient utterances:

"During three months both belligerent groups have been massing forces.

"The allied war council is now in continuous session, assuring complete unity and flexibility of control.

"The British have extended their front.

"Our own forces have taken over a sector northwest of Toul. In addition a number of our detached units are in action in Champagne.

PATROLS ARE ACTIVE.

The report refers to the attacks upon the American front as giving a good idea of "what is taking place on an even larger scale along the entire western front. Patrols are very active," it says. Continuing the report says:

"Early in the week the enemy

AUSTRALIANS IN A RAID KILL 50, TAKE 11

By International News Service.

London, March 4.—Australian forces carried out a powerful raid against the Germans in the Warneton sector of the West Flanders front last night, killing 50 of the garrison and capturing 11, the War Office reported today.

Three other successful raids were made by British forces at Messines, Hollebeke and Passchendaele, all in Belgium.

HEATLESS RULINGS REVOKED

Storrow Permits New England Business to Resume Regular Hours on Wednesday

All emergency rules governing the opening and closing hours of Massachusetts business establishments will be rescinded beginning Wednesday morning.

This announcement was made today by James J. Storrow, Massachusetts Fuel Administrator. The only exception is the nation-wide regulation regarding lightless Thursday and Sunday nights.

The fuel administrators nevertheless emphasize the fact that the coal shortage still obtains, and ask the public to practice voluntary conservation until the danger is over.

The order was in the form of a letter signed by Mr. Storrow, who is in Washington, and was given out by A. S. Cobb of the fuel administration.

MR. STORROW'S RULING.

It was dated March 2, 1918, and read:

> On Wednesday morning, March 6, all opening and closing rules issued by the Massachusetts Fuel Administration will be cancelled. After this date the only order remaining in effect will be the nation-wide order establishing Thursday and Sunday as lightless night, and we should like you to give as much publicity to this fact as is necessary to fully inform your district.
> Although these rules are removed, it should be clearly understood that the fuel situation is still in a critical condition and therefore every form of fuel economy should still be practiced that is possible, without seriously curtailing business.
> I want to thank most sincerely the citizens [illegible] for their co-operation in observing and making [illegible] which, though necessary, certainly have been irksome to all of us. In no other way could we have kept going this winter the many activities essential to our general welfare.
> Very truly yours,
> James J. Storrow,
> Massachusetts Fuel Administrator.

In commenting on this letter, Mr. Cobb said:

"The coal shortage is not over by any means. We don't want the people

AMERICAN BOYS GIVE THRILLING DETAILS OF GERMAN ATTACKS

ENEMY OFFICERS, CALLING FOR SURRENDER, MEET HURRICANE OF LEAD

The German prisoners said that the raid was planned in retaliation for an attack delivered against the Germans near Flirey in January.

GERMAN OFFICERS KILLED.

Both a German captain and a lieutenant, who were in command of the raiders, were killed by the Americans.

Captives told the Americans that they had beeen rehearsing the attack for some time and that the German officers had high expectations of many prisoners and much information. They were completely surprised by the fierce spirit of battle which the young fighters from across the Atlantic showed.

At one American dugout the Germans gathered at the entrance and yelled "Come out, Americans." The only answer, however, was a shower of bombs which scattered the raiders in every direction. In their bombardment the Germans used some gas shells and it was reported that some Americans were "gassed." The men took off masks so they could see better to fight.

ON CHEMIN DES DAMES.

A visit to the Chemin des Dames sector, where Americans are fighting with the French, emphasizes the difference between its conditions and those prevailing on the American front north of Toul.

(The Chemin des Dames is a road which winds along the high ground north of the Aisne River. Toul lies in the Woevre district between the Meuse and Moselle Rivers.)

There is no mud at Chemin des Dames, which is not the case north of Toul. Most of the Americans as well as the French are quartered in deep quarries tunnelled through the homeback heights.

The quarters and offices of the officers are snugly located underground deep enough to withstand the heaviest bombardment.

Although the Germans had made their cavern homes as home like as possible they have been improved since the Americans arrived.

IMPROVED BY YANKEES.

After the battle of the Marne the enemy installed telephones, lighting systems, artesian wells and fresh air circulating system, but the Americans went even farther with such luxuries as real beds, canteens, rest rooms and even shower baths.

The pantheon quarries, the principals caves occupied by the Americans, can accommodate 2,000 men, and it is unnecessary for them to emerge for days on end, their supplies arriving from the Aisne Valley side. The Americans replaced the French names of various tunnels with such title as "Lenox avenue subway" "Hoosac Tunnel" and "Mammouth Cave."

Gas proof doorways obviate the necessity of wearing masks even when the Germans are throwing gas shells. However, in the trenches on the reverse slopes of the valley beyond, masks are often necessary.

The advanced defensive position is merely a line of shell craters and unconnected barbed wire entanglements which are maintained through unending energy.

Germans throw up an incessant stream of star shells. These flares compel the workers to quit their labors and lie flat like fallen statues, as the least movement reveals their presence.

DEFENCES REORGANIZED.

The first line trenches were solidly organized and comparatively dry. The Americans are highly elated at being placed on an active sector.

"We knew as soon as Fritz put down his bombardment that he was attacking," said a Texas youngster lying at a field hospital, suffering from a slight shell wound.

"Our officers ordered us to take cover when the bombardment started. We reached our dugouts just as the shells began whistling overhead. We could hear the thud-thud everywhere as the enemy projectiles were detonating, also a few slight reports from shells landing without exploding. We thought these were gas shells, and were ordered to put on our gas masks.

"Then, after a half hour, Fritz stopped his bombardment. We were ordered to 'stand to.' As we were clambering out of our dugout we saw the destruction done by the bombardment. It seemed as if every square yard had been hit. Black earth had been turned up everywhere, resulting in a wierd transformation since we had descended to our dugouts.

"Then, to the right, we heard hand grenades bursting. New raiders were coming, and we received orders to repel the attack. We formed a grouplet of fixed bayonets, and meantime our shells were whistling across, planting a barrage outside our barbed wire, thus preventing Fritzy from escaping and keeping the Germans from sending reinforcements to their raiders.

"The Germans flooded the sky with star shells, but it was hard to make out the enemy in the driving snow. Pretty soon we saw a bunch of Germans coming towards us with fixed bayonets and opened fire. They turned off, escaping us. Our lieutenant followed, trying to cut them off, but a shell dropped near him wounding him, me and another lad. Most of us threw off our gas masks but kept on our tin hats. We maintained a steady stream of rifle fire.

"The Fritzies carried rifles but they did not fire much, tossing grenades instead. They dropped a good many Mauser rifles in our lines, I hear."

"I was in a dugout with a captain," said another soldier who was wounded in the thigh during the same raid. "A shell wrecked part of our shelter, but the noise was so deafening we could not tell exactly what had happened. I think the captain was killed there, as I didn't see him come out.

"Almost as soon as the bombardment stopped the barrage commenced. The whole side of our dugout was blown away by a big shell, and some of us jumped out. We saw a half dozen Germans and let fly some hand grenades. While they were looking down the crater we smashed the stairway to the real entrance of the dugout. They were scared to death of our bombs and ran off. We opened rifle fire and at the same time distinguished more Germans to the right of us. As we started to tackle them, a bunch of our lads from another direction jumped on them and we had to stop firing for fear we would hit Americans.

"They seemed to be slugging each other with their fists and using their gun butts, as we didn't see any rifle flashes. Those Fritzies beat it pretty soon.

"Then we kept losing them in the darkness and were afraid to shoot unless we were sure we wouldn't hit our own fellows. Fritz evidently thought we were 'easy meat,' as the raiders didn't seem to be able to distinguish each other, either.

"The fact that the Germans launched a concentric attack across the neck of our salient and the adjacent projection, instead of a frontal attempt to enter our trenches, indicates the enemy's optimistic ideas of success in driving into the American lines.

AMERICANS UNAFRAID.

"The Germans intended a turning movement toward our front with the object of sweeping up all the Americans in the salient, killing all who resisted. But the Americans, far from frightened by the tremendous preliminary bombardment with guns of all calibres and trench mortars, including the largest types, as well as with mine throwers, were surcharged with lust of combat and with an intense desire to prove their mettle.

"Our troops leaped up like tigers and fought like lions. They never forget for a moment the arduous training they have undergone with the rifle. Every dead German found in No Man's Land was full of bullet holes.

"The German bombardment had made gaps in the American barbed wire defences and our salient was but thinly held. It was when individual groups of Americans met the enemy that mortal isolated combats occurred. The main body of Germans then chased across No Man's Land, where our bullets and barrage took a heavy toll. The defensive works in our salient were blotted out by the enemy's bombardment, but the Americans immediately reorganized their positions while our batteries maintained a defensive curtain fire."

LIQUID FLAMES NEXT.

Said a California youth, proudly:

"When the big shells and mine throwers exploded the concussion raised you right off the ground. There's just one card the Dutchmen are holding up their sleeve from us, that's liquid flames, and if the 'flammenwerfer' are no worse than the 'minnies' (minenwerfer) they can't hurt me."

The chief complaint of the raided troops concerns articles they lost due to the bombardment, which blew dugouts and trench corners to pieces.

"I lost my safety razor and have to let the company barber shave me—he should be carver at a cook wagon," said a young Alabaman. Another's complaint was:

"I dug in the ruins of my dugout all morning for my girl's photograph. I finally found it, in halves, ruined beyond recognition.

"The only decent deck of cards we had was scattered in fifty-two directions when a shell burst into our bomb-proof," said an Iowa youngster.

An old sergeant exploded over the fact that the losses were not heavier. "The poor captain," said he, "hustled us all out of the first line when the bombardment started and planted a lot of us in an intermediate trench that hadn't been used for a long time, between the first and second line trenches. The Dutchmen's shells were busting all around us, but only a few landed in our position. We were up to our necks in mud, which saved us from a lot of flying shrapnel.

"Fritz wrecked the first line, and it's lucky we didn't try to stay. Then when they cut in our rear and started forward we surprised them by firing from the old trench—it wasn't even a trench, merely a ditch!"

The War in Europe

By ANTHONY ARNOUX,
Famous Writer on Military Topics.

The activity on the western front has distinctly increased in the past few days, and it looks as though it were possible that the "feeling out process," to more serious operations, had begun.

It is still too soon, however, to make a positive assertion that such is the case, as this activity may be merely sporadic, though this does not seem likely. Not only are the trench raids much more frequent, and more widely spread over the whole of this front, but considerably more formidable forces are being employed in most.

If this suspicion that the feeling out process has actually commenced, we shall probably have a continuation, gradually growing more intense, of this activity for a week or ten days, with the artillery also little by little augmenting its attack, until finally vigorous artillery fighting will be going on well over the line.

Finally faint infantry attacks, but in force, will begin at several points, with perhaps the real attack mingled with them, and then the much talked of offensive will be underway. All of these preliminaries will, however, consume a number of days.

It also appears reasonably certain that the Teutons will begin an offensive on the Italian front at about the same time that the western breaks into flame. The question is whether this will proceed or follow that on the western front. The answer to this question largely depends on the amount of snow still in the valleys of the mountains to the east and west of Lake Garda, and unfortunately on this front we have little or no reliable information.

CONTINUE TO PUSH ON.

In Russia the Teutons' continue to push on. In the Ukraine Kieff has been captured and both to the north and south of that city, by the joint efforts of the Teutonic and Ukrainian troops, the country is rapidly being cleared of the various colored Bolsheviki guards.

In Podolia, the Austrians advancing from the direction of Galicia, have moved deep into the heart of that province, driving the remnants of the Russian army before them, capturing many prisoners, and getting possession of a very considerable booty.

In North Russia the situation is not so clear. The Germans are apparently making a drive northeast toward the railroad connecting Moscow and Petrograd, with the intention apparently of cutting the practically only remaining line of communication between Petrograd and the rest of Russia.

This once accomplished, Petrograd would have little left to do but surrender, and with Petrograd would go Kronstadt and the Russian fleet.

Any serious defense by the Russians at any point seems an impossibility, even though the Lenine government should arm all its adherents, since these bereft of leadership, military experience and above all, of the power of coherent action, would not be very difficult for regular troops well provided with artillery to disperse.

Such reports as reach us regarding the peace negotiations between the Rumanians and Teutons, do not seem to indicate any immediate result. Still we cannot place implicit confidence in our sources of information.

EXPECT JAPAN TO INTERVENE.

The suggestion of Japan that she should intervene in eastern Siberia, does not seem to have met with unbounded enthusiasm among her allies. This on the whole is not surprising, as several very delicate questions with possibly far reaching consequences are involved. Undoubtedly, however, Japan will intervene and with a free hand.

In the present conditions no nation interested is in any position to say nay, nor even to attempt to pin her down to any precise limits of action. The other phase of the question is even more delicate than that affecting Japan.

How will the Bolsheviki, and the de facto government of the Russian Republic view the intervention on behalf of the allies, who have laid such stress on their democracy, of an imperialistic nation like Japan, and how will the allies explain this apparent stultification of their former professions of interest in the permanence and welfare of the new Russian democracy?

TURK MASSACRE OF THOUSANDS OF ARMENIANS

pends a great deal on what course Germany takes. And in this connection it again was pointed out today that no matter what may happen in Vladivostok, whether the Bolsheviki seize the supplies stored there or not, they cannot be diverted to German use without passing through Harbin, where the Chinese forces are in complete control.

READY FOR ANYTHING.

Military expedience, of course, will decide whether Japan is to undertake an aggressive campaign in Siberia. Tokio advices, supplemented by the utterances of high Japanese diplomats and soldiers in London, Paris and Rome, make it very plain that all preparations have been completed to "take most decided steps to meet any situation that may arise."

And everywhere in official circles today it was pointed out that the United States is fully convinced of the whole-hearted purpose of the Japanese government to work hand in glove with the Allies against Germany.

Meyer London Calls on Congress to Oppose U. S. Invasion of Siberia

By International News Service.

Washington, March 4.—A resolution calling upon the American Congress to assert its confidence in the Russian people and to repudiate any suggestion that the United States undertake an invasion of Siberia in company with Japan, was introduced in the House today by Representative Meyer London, Socialist, of New York.

The agitation for such action, London asserted, is fomented by "unclean influences." To carry out such a scheme would be, he said, to subvert the very things the United States went into the war to gain. The resolution was referred to the foreign relations committee.

The Russian people eventually will rise and drive the invader from their soil, London asserted. Should the United States and the allies approve the Japanese plan, London declared, Russia will lose all faith in the boasted democracy of the Western world. President Wilson, in view of his speeches, could not support such a project, London believed.

made two attempts to reach our lines, but was driven off by machine gun fire. On March 1, the enemy developed a sharply driven attack. After a short struggle the hostile detachment was repulsed. The Germans are now using gas along our front. Our men are becoming accustomed to this weapon. Our gas masks are efficiently protective. Our artillery has been very busy shelling enemy positions and has inflicted considerable damage on gun and mortar emplacements."

RAIDERS DRIVEN OFF.

The Chemin des Dames raid in which American volunteers participated is only briefly referred to as "very successfully carried through."

The French front has been comparatively quiet. The attack on February 24, near Aspaich, Upper Alsace, is referred to as a coup de main, destroying hostile defensive works and shelters.

Artillery duels are insistent and intense in the Verdun salient and Upper Alsace.

Along the British front the Germans have been alert, with partially successful raids in the vicinity of the Ypres-Roulers Railway. In the Passchendaele and Cambrai regions all attacks have been driven off.

While the enemy is continually bringing up fresh units, owing to transportation difficulties this has been a slow and laborious process.

BLOCKED BY BELGIANS.

"The boldest enterprise undertaken by the enemy during the week took place north of Dixmude," continues the report. "Here, after prolonged artillery preparations, the enemy endeavored to throw a bridge across the Yser. The Belgians successfully prevented six consecutive attempts to push this operation to successful conclusion and the Germans were finally compelled to abandon the undertaking."

At the time the report was completed the Russian-German peace had not been concluded. It was felt that the events in the East, now likely ended, would have an effect on the West front operations.

The report makes it plain that if the rank and file of the Russians refuse to accept the German-made peace there is a hope that the East will yet make trouble for Germany.

In conclusion the report says:

"In the Italian theatre the allies executed a number of minor raids along the Piave. The enemy confined his activity to increasingly heavy bombardments west of the Asiago plateau.

"The enemy is continuing the bombardment of the cities of Venetia by air craft. Repeated attacks were made against Venice, and much damage was inflicted upon churches and other buildings.

"In the caucasus the Turkish forces are meeting with little opposition.

"In Palestine the British are in close contact with the Turks who are retreating northward through the valley of the Jordan.

"In Mesopotamia the British are advancing up the Euphrates and have arrived in the vicinity of Hit, which is reported to have been evacuated by the Turks."

Storrow Removes Restrictions on Business, Beginning Wednesday Morning

to proceed on the assumption that it is. The pinch is still with us and there is no reason why anybody should stop the practice of voluntary conservation. In fact, voluntary conservation is necessary if we are to proceed under conditions approximating normal."

Today's announcement marks the removal of the last of a series of the most drastic rules ever laid upon the people of the country. When the coal shortage arrived New England was one of the first sections of the country to take remedial action.

Mr. Storrow on January 14 put into effect the famous early closing and late opening order which affected all industries except those engaged in the manufacture of government supplies. Theatres, saloons and other amusement places were particularly hard hit. The saloons could not open until 9 a. m. and closed at 10 p. m.

Business houses were not injured so much by the late opening and early closing. Drug stores were permitted to keep open, but were not permitted to sell goods other than drugs during the time that other stores were closed.

Then came the order of Administrator Garfield, prescribing five days closing of business from Jan. 18 to Jan. 22 inclusive, to be followed by Monday holidays lasting up to and including March 25.

This was followed by meatless, lightless and other days on which the consumption of various necessities was prohibited. Protests were made, particularly against the five-day closing law, but on the whole the public bore the restrictions with remarkable restraint.

Under the new ruling, all business houses, stores, saloons, theatres, bowling alleys and other places of amusements will now be permitted to resume their old hours.

LOOT CONGRESS STREET OFFICE OF $1,600 IN CASH

The safe in the office of the Nightingale & Childs Company, at No. 205 Congress street, was robbed by a band of expert cracksmen and more than $1,600 in cash and Liberty Bonds stolen.

The robbery was discovered by Reserve Patrolman John C. Irving of the City Hall avenue station, who found the lock of the front door broken. Entering the building he found that the safe had been robbed. He notified police headquarters.

Inspectors Gleavy, Burke and Morrissey found that the combination dial had been knocked off and the lever broken, putting the lock out of commission.

Gloves were used by the robbers, according to the inspectors, to avoid telltale finger prints. A pair of old gloves were found on the floor together, with a $500 Liberty Bond that had been dropped by one of the thieves.

The police are not sure as to the exact time of the robbery, but believe that it was committed in the afternoon or early evening. After forcing the front door, the robbers camouflaged the door to give it the appearance of being locked.

Harold H. Shumway, treasurer of the company, was called by the police, and assisted in estimating the loss. It is figured that about $300 in cash and $1,400 in Liberty Bonds were taken.

BLANKETS

BLANKETS will probably sell at about 50 per cent more next spring than we are charging now, and it will not be easy to obtain them. Scarcity of the finer all-wool and cotton and-wool mixtures has already affected the prices, but the full effect will probably not be felt until next season.

IN order that our regular customers may anticipate the requirements of next season, we are offering various lots at prices which are particularly low and which will seem even lower in comparison with the prices to be charged later.

About 200 pairs of wool-filled blankets, 72 by 84, serviceable and of standard weight; blue or pink border. Per pair $6.50

About 50 pairs of wool-filled, extra-size blankets, medium size, at less than the wholesale cost at the mills today. Per pair............ $6.00

CALLS ELEVATED IMPROVEMENT A MYTH

Road Is Driving People to Tunnels, Says Senator Fitzgerald

That the so-called improved service of the Boston Elevated Railway is more of a myth than a reality is the declaration of Senator John I. Fitzgerald. He says he is puzzled to know where it is improved.

His statement followed a declaration by Elevated officials that there has been a great improvement in service within a few days and that the service is now within thirty-five to fifty trips a day of being normal.

"I have hunted through the West End to learn where the Elevated has made any improvements in service, and I confess I am puzzled to know why the officials made any such statement," said Senator Fitzgerald.

"They must consider it an improvement to take off three or four lines and drive the people into the tunnel and subways, or force them to walk. I think the improvement is more of a myth than a reality."

In other districts of the city where improvements are stated to have been made, patrons of the "L" were equally puzzled to account for the overcrowded cars and the long delays that have been characteristic of the service of the raod during the Winter.

PREDICT PUBLIC CONTROL.

"More Elevated camouflage," was the concensus of comment upon the statement by the road that more trips were being run daily and more men were at work to man the cars.

That public control of the road is sure to result from the long continued persecution of the public through intolerable service that for weeks was not remedied is the opinion that is gradually forming in Boston.

The seeming reluctance with which improvements were made, and then only after a public drive and denunciation of the tactics of the officials of the road who were charged with trying to force higher fares upon the people, is determining the belief that real service lies in public control.

Despite the claim of officials of the road that 2,000 miles a day is the total amount being lost off the regular schedule there are many who say that the times and the conditions demand much more than normal service, and Senator Fitzgerald is one of them.

"As far as the West End is concerned the service is rotten," he says. "This is a thickly populated district, and good service there would help some 80,000 people.

"Better service would help these persons to visit the sick oftener in the hospitals, and it would enable the people to buy cheaper in the market district. If public convenience and comfort was being considered by the Elevated its officials would restore some of the lines they have taken off within a few weeks.

HARD TO REACH HOSPITALS.

"The belt line that used to give us service to Dudley street is now cut off at Lenox street. This line served to connect the South and West Ends, but now most of the people who use it to go from one section to another have to change.

"In this section we have the Massachusetts General Hospital and the Boston lying-in hospital. It was once possible to ride up to these hospitals without changing cars, but now people have to change two or three times and are subject to great inconveniences.

"The Brighton and Allston cars that ran through the West End have been taken off. The Cambridge line which passed through Hanover and Portland streets is also a thing of the past. This line gave the people a chance to visit the market districts and buy food cheaper than they can in many of the nearer markets. Now they must walk.

"We had two lines running through Charles street that have been taken off—the South Boston line and the East Cambridge line. It was convenient for the people of this district to step on either of these cars and without change be brought to these places. But now they are obliged to go to Scollay square or Park street.

PLEAS FOR RELIEF FUTILE.

"Instead of giving the people of the West End any improvements, I think the Elevated is giving them a raw deal. We have petitioned for relief, but it does no good. The road intends to drive the people into the subways and the tunnel.

"There are not enough cars running through the West End to give the people who reside there the service they ought to have. And driving them into tunnels and subways is not good service, because it forces them to ride in cars that are already overcrowded and to make several changes, where before they had through rides.

"When we asked for better service the road raised the cry that it could not get the men and the cars. If improvements are being made anywhere, it is about time that the West End were included in them. We have suffered from bad service long enough."

U. S. Soldiers Most Warmly Clad of All the Allies

By D. M. EDWARDS,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, March 4.—America's men in the trenches are the most warmly clad of all the allied troops. Enormous quantities of clothing are at their call.

These facts were made known today by Charles E. Eisenman, vice-chairman of the section of supplies of the Council of National Defence, in answer to an attack made upon the clothing equipment of General Pershing's forces.

Unofficial complaint has been made that the overcoats worn by the men in the trenches are too light. These complaints do not come from the men themselves. Today the American soldier in the trenches has a heavy woolen uniform, heavy underwear, rubber boots that come to the armpits, warm moccasins to wear in the boots, sweaters, warm vests, a knitted helmet for head wear, heavy woolen socks and two different types of sturdy shoes for camp and field work.

There are about 789,000 overcoats in reserve unissued, 584,000 woolen coats, 1,124,000 woolen breeches, 537,000 cotton coats and 2,296,000 cotton breeches for Summer wear not drawn upon; 6,500,000 pairs of field shoes and 6,500,000 pairs of marching shoes.

BROOKLINE PRISONER CONFESSES LARCENY

George Borton, twenty-nine, appeared in Brookline Court today to answer two charges of larceny and breaking and entering. He pleaded guilty of larceny and was held in $3,000 for a hearing March 11. Borton, the Brookline police claim, has been hiring rooms in apartments and staying only until he had a chance to break into some other lodger's room. He was identified by two persons. Most of the hauls have consisted of money and jewelry.

'MASTER MIND' IS WARNED BY MANSTER

Harry C. Manster, accused slayer of Policeman Joseph C. Reiser, declares the influence of some "master mind," whom he designates as "C," caused his sweetheart to jilt him. Manster is in jail awaiting trial for murder.

In a long letter to the girl, Manster says that he will "expose" the master mind who brought about his arrest for a crime of which he is innocent. The letter in part reads:

"I do not blame you, dear, for asking me not to send you any more letters. I fully realize how you feel in the matter, but I want to say that I am very sorry for what I said in my other letter and I want you to accept my heartfelt apologies.

"As I sit here in this cell I have plenty of opportunity to think, and my thoughts turn toward you. When I received your letter the other day telling me not to write you any more, I'll admit it made me fly into a rage.

"Since then I have given the matter much consideration. I have considered what we were to each other; I thought of the great times we had together and of what I did for you.

"I am human, as you know, and have good qualities. I realize now what my mental and moral deficiencies are, but there is a great deal of goodness in me as you know. I know what your real feelings are.

"A master mind has you in his control at the present time. They may be able to control your writing to me, but believe me, dearest, they cannot control your affection for me.

"I want to say to you that I will expose that master mind because the man who works in a place downtown and was responsible for my being arrested and put in this jail had a motive for doing it. I am going to expose that dump.

"The man knows that the police are familiar with what goes on there and he thinks by exposing me the police will let him continue carrying on his nefarious business.

"C—— will have lots of other things to think of yet. Of course I know that if the truth is spoken the police have nothing on me in that murder."

NEVADA WOMAN TO RUN FOR SENATOR

By International News Service.

Washington, March 4.—"The man in the street and the woman in the home."

It is to attract the support of these that Miss Anne Martin, a candidate to succeed the late Senator Newlands of Nevada, was today working upon a platform upon which she hopes to be carried into the United States Senate.

"Little Governor Anne," she is called in her home State, has a record for achievement and grit that indicates the kind of a campaign she will wage. She led the fight that won suffrage for the women of Nevada and was a factor in winning the eight-hour law for the women of that State.

That she will be able to stand the strain of a hard campaign is proved by the fact that she has climbed Mt. Whitney, second highest peak in the United States, and that a treacherous mountain pass in Nevada was named in her honor after she had climbed to its head in the dead of Winter.

She held the Nevada tennis championship for three years, and won many medals in golf tourneys in England. She was jailed for picketing at the White House and was pardoned by the President.

GERMAN LEADER OF SOCIALISTS SEES REFORM

It was first published in Vorwaerts, official organ of the German Socialist party.

By PHILIP SCHEIDEMANN.

There will be no rest in Prussia until equal suffrage has been introduced. The Prussian junkers and their handstrappers of all shades should no longer deceive themselves about this. They should stop playing with fire.

The men who return from the trenches have forgotten all fear. Drumfire has made them fearless. Now here in the first line trenches of the firing zone have they found places reserved for voters of the first class. With each year of the war their resolve has been forged firmer and firmer to put their all at stake only for a new Germany, but never for the protection of privileges accruing from birth or purse.

KING GIVES PLEDGE.

The King of Prussia has most solemnly pledged his word to the introduction of equal suffrage, as has the Chancellor of the empire.

They have thereby demonstrated that they do not intend to shut their eyes any longer to the signs of the times. Woe unto those who, prompted by class egoism, persist in shutting their eyes to these signs.

The German people—not alone the Prussians—will no longer permit the destinies of the nation to be determined by a caste which is but a small fraction of the people.

The Prussian Diet is the strongest bulwark of the reaction. It must fall, and it will fall; for a democratic Prussia is infinitely more important for Germany and her position as a world power than any territorial expansion could ever be.

MEANS FREE PEOPLE.

A free Prussia, which would mean a free Germany, would place the German people in a position to overcome all consequences of the war much more rapidly than could enforced "indemnities," for whose sake the war would have to be continued indefinitely entailing the loss of additional thousands of lives."

There is no divergence of opinion among the German workingmen regarding the absolute necessity of equal suffrage and the determination of German labor to force it through at all costs is unshakable.

ONE DEAD, 3 HURT ON TEXAN AVIATION FIELD

Fort Worth, Tex., March 4.—One man is dead and three are injured today as a result of Sunday airplane accidents at aviation fields near Fort Worth. The victims are members of the British Royal Flying Corps.

Hays died within an hour and Bate is expected to recover. Lieutenant Frank Flynn and Cadet E. A. Carroll sustained serious injuries in an airplane fall.

BLAME LOGAN FOR RETURN OF OFFICERS

Personal Politics Played in Ninth, Charge Dunn and Casey

By WILLARD H. DAVIS.

Charges that personal politics on the part of Colonel Edward L. Logan were responsible for their discharge from the 101st Regiment, Overseas Infantry, were made today by Lieutenant-Colonel John H. Dunn and Major William J. Casey upon their return to Boston.

Discrimination and much personal feeling, they say, were important factors in connection with their dismissal from the service.

The discharged officers have already completed plans to take their cases to Secretary of War Baker at Washington. Both men are bitter over the treatment accorded them. They insist upon immediate reinstatement.

The officers have nothing but words of the highest praise, however, for the rank and file of the famous Fighting Ninth. Colonel Dunn expresses himself as follows:

"Thank God the feeling that exists between myself and Colonel Logan has not penetrated into the ranks."

Major Casey, who will go immediately to Washington with his papers, did not care to go into detail about his discharge, which was on the grounds of inefficiency. He has been in the service for twenty-eight years and was considered one of the ablest battalion commanders in the National Guard.

For many months it has been persistently rumored that ill-feeling existed between Logan and Casey and Dunn. The climax was reached this week when announcement came that Casey and Dunn were on their way to Boston.

Colonel Dunn, on the train from New York, talked freely of the conditions as they existed. He frankly admitted that he was talking as a civilian and not as an officer. When I met him in the Grand Central depot I asked him about his legs. He replied:

"My legs bad? Damn it, I could walk to Boston right now."

Major Casey said: "I am too much of a soldier to talk about the deal handed me, but let me assure you that if things don't materialize I'll have a few things to tell the fathers and mothers of the splendid lads now in the old Ninth."

Colonel Dunn in his usual frank manner, was a little more blunt than the major, and said: "The people of Boston, who have been in touch with the Fighting Ninth's activities for the past few years, well know who is responsible for me being back here. Although Bill won't say it about himself, I will, and the same applies to me, we're subjects of personal politics, discrimination and much personal feeling."

Both the Colonel and Major look fit. "Jack" Dunn has a chest expansion of forty-four, a waist measure of thirty-six and blood pressure of 128, which means he has the blood pressure of a twenty-eight-year-old young man.

"If that isn't proof I don't know what is," said the colonel.

The major weighs about 208, stands nearly six feet high, and is in fit condition.

Colonel Dunn believes that economic conditions in Germany will play a large part in bringing a speedy end to the great conflict.

BIG PROVIDENCE ROBBERY FRUSTRATED

Providence, R. I., March 4.—John J. Francis, twenty, pleaded guilty today to what Chief Police Inspector John P. Maguire calls the most daring attempt at daylight robbery he has ever known.

Tomasso Falco, thirty, is also under arrest in the case, but has pleaded not guilty to the charge against him. He is a Plainfield street grocer.

Francis, until Saturday night, was employed by Kimball & Cowell, wholesale meat dealers, in Washington street. The police assert that Francis and Falco were involved in a plot to rob the wholesale house, and that twice this year they took away big truckloads of hams, lard and pork.

The first robbery, the police charge, occurred on January 1, and the second about four weeks ago. Francis was evidently under suspicion, the police say, for on Saturday, just before he finished work, someone remarked in his hearing that the watchman would be off duty all Sunday morning.

The result was, the police say, that at 1 o'clock Sunday morning an automobile truck was driven into the yard beside the wholesale company's shed and three men proceeded to load it with provisions. When they had almost finished their work, at [illegible] o'clock, the watchman, Jeremiah Sheehan, appeared with a gun and held them up. He then backed out of the yard to look for a policeman, knowing that the truck was safe, but the men escaped.

The police say that Falco and Francis were two of the men and that they know the other and expect to arrest him. Francis, they say, told them that Falco paid him $100 for the first truckload stolen and $85 for the second.

Francis and Falco are held in $1,000 each for a hearing March 12.

REFUSE TO QUIT WORK IF MOONEY IS HANGED

Chicago, March 4.—The Chicago Federation of Labor defeated a resolution for a general strike if Thomas J. Mooney is hanged in California, loyalty to the men in the trenches being given as the reason.

The Federation instructed that Samuel Gompers be sought for advice as to what action should be taken to secure a reprieve from Governor Stephens of California.

Saturday's Pork Comes Back to Table

By International News Service.

Washington, March 4.—Greatly increased production of meat and meat products and the observance of the conservation days generally throughout the country have enabled the food administration to announce a reduction in meatless meals and the elimination of porkless Saturdays.

Together with this favorable situation, an urgent appeal is made to the public to reduce further its consumption of bread and breadstuffs generally to help meet the increased demands coming from the allies. There has been a falling off in the wheat arrivals from Argentine and efforts will be made by this country to meet the deficiency.

Announcement is made that so long as the present excellent conditions prevail, special restrictions will be kept on the beefless and porkless Tuesday. The meatless meal heretofore asked daily and the porkless Saturday will be eliminated.

SAYS AMERICAN WON LIGHTING BATTLE

President Collins of Council Tells of Long Fight on Contract

President Walter L. Collins of the City Council, who fought against the original ten-year lighting contract, is loud in his praise of the AMERICAN'S fight for a better contract. He said:

"The Boston AMERICAN is to be congratulated upon its most valued fight against the original, straight ten-year contract. I opposed it first because I believed a ten-year term too long a time to give any public corporation the right to light the streets of Boston, particularly without effective arbitration.

"The arbitration clause as originally presented to us was vague, indefinite and worthless.

"The fight lasted many months. The City Council received much help from the Boston AMERICAN, which paper fought the long-term contract sought by the Edison Company. Their articles were very effective.

"It resulted finally in having the original contract rejected and in its place a substitute, in which was embodied a compulsory arbitration clause which meant something.

"The result of this arbitration, as justified from a public standpoint, together with the stand taken by the majority of the members of the City Council, I venture to suggest, that if times were not so abnormal, and prices of material not so high, that the price fixed by the commission may have been even lower.

"I am looking forward to the next arbitration, which comes in about three years, on this same subject, and I trust and expect that the price of electricity for lighting Boston streets will be even lower than the prices just announced by the Commission.

"In conclusion, the sterling work of John Coulthurst, now deceased, together with those members of the Council who fought the measure with me, would have been useless had it not been for the public-spirited support of the AMERICAN and the excellent handling of the case by John A. Sullivan, who was Corporation Counsel at the time, and the man who presented the facts before the Commission."

LABOR SCORES McCALL ON THE L

was given instructions to appear before the proper authorities and protest against an increase in fare until a public hearing was held. The resolution was adopted at a meeting in Wells Memorial Hall.

Mr. McGrady stated that the Elevated had been attempting to secure the support of the labor leaders for some time in its attempt to secure the six-cent fare and had been unsuccessful. The company, he said, then attempted to "sandbag" the public into giving it the increase, and had the "immunity bill" introduced to the Legislature for the purpose of making the union street car men break their contract.

The union men, however, forced the company to give them an increase instead, and now, according to President McGrady, the road is attempting to get the public to grant it a far larger increase than it gave the men.

PEOPLE MUST BE HEARD.

He said that in his opinion the Governor made a fatal mistake in requesting the Legislature to enable the road to break the five-cent fare contract with the city, which runs to 1920. He believed the Governor would not have the support of the people, that his action was imprudent, to say the least, and that it did not represent the best interests of the people of the city.

Mr. McGrady said that the public should have a chance to be heard on any such subject in which they were vitally interested. He declared that the Boston C. L. U. would not only protest to the Legislature, but would hold mass meetings, if necessary, in every section of the city to register its protest against the action and recommendation of the Governor in this matter.

He said that the service which the Elevated is giving the public is the most wretched in the country, and that the company should not be allowed to raise its fares until some guarantee of improved service was given.

Mr. McGrady said he had been told that the Elevated was making no attempt to give decent service and that it was about time some action was taken to ascertain the real reason.

PETERS URGES HIGHER TAX LIMIT

Real Estate Men, Represented by Washburn, Oppose Bill at State House

Mayor Peters appeared before the Legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs in the State House today to advocate his bill to increase Boston's tax limit. The Mayor proposes to increases it $2 this year, $2 next year and $1 in 1920. It is generally believed that the Mayor's action will result in a higher rate. It is now $17.70 per $1,000.

George F. Washburn, president of the Massachusetts Real Estate Association, and other representatives of property owners were present to oppose Mayor Peter's bill.

CROWD AT HEARING.

It was the mayor's first appearance before a legislative committee since his election. He was accompanied by Assistant Corporation Counsel George A. Flynn. The hearing room was crowded with people, including many prominent Bostonians. Chairman John R. Murphy of the Finance Commission requested that an opportunity be given that organization to be heard later.

Mayor Peters told the committee that the estimates for running the various city departments and the general municipal expenses for the current year would require $19,401,460. Under the existing tax limit, he said, the amount available is only $14,911,216.42, a deficit of $4,490,243.58.

WANTS BETTER STREETS.

Under the present law the city gets for these purposes from the tax rate only $11.02 per $1,000. Of that amount $4.50 goes to the schools. The Mayor explained that this leaves only $6.52 per $1,000 for general municipal expenses.

He declared that he did not feel that the wages of any city employe should be reduced to obtain the additional money required for municipal expenses. He also pointed out that one of the chief objects that the additional money is needed for is to improve Boston's neglected streets.

"If the payrolls in the departments affected, which amount to approximately $10,000,000, were reduced," said Mayor Peters, "so as to execute the work covered by the budget program, the payroll reduction would be nearly 15 per cent.

"The city employes could not be expected to stand such a reduction; such a reduction would be extreme and unjust; the employes would leave for other occupations at living wages and the public service would suffer an irreparable injury."

CITES WAR CONDITIONS.

"The additional money is needed for a two-fold purpose. First, to provide additional money demanded by war conditions, and, second, to improve at once Boston's badly neglected streets."

The Mayor explained that two-thirds of the additional money will be used to maintain the general public service, and that the remaining one-third will be devoted to a well-considered and comprehensive program of street construction.

26 COMPLETE VESSELS TO BE READY THIS MONTH

New York, March 4.—Twenty-six complete vessels will be placed in operation by the shipyards and men of the United States during this month and thirty-four additional vessels will be launched.

Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the United States Shipping Board, so announced in an impromptu address at an army and navy benefit performance at the Hippodrome.

"It will take millions of tons of shipping to overcome the menace of the submarine," he said. "We have 180 shipyards with 700 ways and 500,000 men who should produce 2,000 ships."

RED CROSS CANTEEN FOR AMERICAN TROOPS

The New England Division Headquarters, American Red Cross, has received a cable from Major James H. Perkins stating that "at the request of the United States Army the Red Cross has arranged to install with all American troops now engaged in actual fighting on the Western front, a special line service of canteens.

"During the past six months similar canteens in the French front lines have served more than 1,000,000 poilus with hot drinks. Today the Red Cross has fifteen rolling canteens behind the lines, which are often sent out in the small hours of the night with hot drinks for the fighting men. It is because of the effectiveness of this service along the French front that the American army has asked the Red Cross for a similar service."

HEAVY TRUCKS DELIVERING MUNITIONS

Mack Motor Company Manager Tells of Work in War Zone

The heavy duty Mack trucks made in 3½, 5½ and 7½-ton sizes are all being taken by the United States government for war purposes. These powerful machines so proved their ability to pull through mud, deep sand and bad going, that the government officials decided to take over the complete factory production.

While this naturally injures the business of the local Mack Motor Truck Company, the manager, Norman G. Halliday, feels that the advertisement derived from the government taking the complete production will more than offset the bad effect, which is now caused due to an inability to deliver trucks for local or domestic use.

When it is considered that trucks in the war zone operate largely at night and that they must be run without lights, the reason for the heavy bumper becomes immediately apparent.

Munition trucks carrying shells etc. to the front line trenches are operated in trains of from ten to fifty machines and on a dark night running without lights about the only way a driver can tell when to stop is when he bumps into the truck ahead.

Although the complete production of the heavy duty Mack trucks has been taken over the International Motor Company are manufacturing and offer for immediate or quick deliveries the standard Mack 1 1½ 2 and 2½ ton sizes.

"Today the automobile is looked upon as a means of quick transportation. It is a vehicle for getting about in double quick time," says W. C. Sills, general manager of sales of the Chevrolet Motor Company. "It is plainly evident then that the motor car will always be in demand and that its usefulness will increase.

"The automobile is getting to be a great factor in business and is purchased for the purpose of increasing the daily efficiency of the business man. It saves his time and therefore permits him to do more.

SEES BIGGER DEMAND.

"With the increased activity that will prevail in this country, it stands to reason that the demand for automobiles will increase rather than diminish. The farmer is the largest purchaser of medium priced cars. He is not only going to continue being a great factor in the purchase of motor cars, but a greater one from this time on.

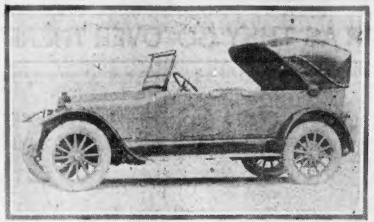
"His purchasing power is going to increase from day to day, for the good reason that his wealth will increase. The farmer in a period like this will rapidly multiply his resources. He will secure prices for his product that he never enjoyed before. The farmer sells the necessities of life. More acreage will be under cultivation this year than ever before, and this means increased earnings.

TRUE ALSO OF CITIES.

"We know from experience that if a farmer is prosperous, the whole country is prosperous, and so there is no reason why he should think that the demand for cars will diminish.

"What is true of rural communities is also true of towns and cities. Increased activity will increase the demand. It will be impossible to reach the efficiency desired without the use of the automobiles."

STANDARD "8" TOURING CAR A HANDSOME SHOW MODEL



The motor car has done much for the medical fraternity. It has enlarged the day's work in a manner impossible before, for a physician must cover his territory, which is often scattered, and the less time he spends on the road the more time he has to spend with his patients. If the work is light, he can do it quickly, and get a breathing spell. If it is heavy, he can still cover the field and perhaps save himself some precious hours of sleep.

The doctor has no choice of weather conditions. In fact, he is usually busiest when the weather is most inclement. The motor car saves him from exposure and affords him protection that the old-fashioned buggy could never give.

The old-time doctor used to bed his own horse, and pitch down hay from the loft by aid of a lantern, and often hitch up under the same conditions. The modern physician steps into his car, presses the button and is off. When he returns, he slams the garage door.

But, most of all, dependability is the feature that the physician demands in his motoring equipment. His time is too valuable and too many of his visits are urgent to permit of his taking any chances. The Buick car seems admirably adopted to the physician's needs. It has a long record of achievement, and a reputation built on nearly twenty years of consistent performance.

ROOSEVELT OUT OF PHYSICAL BALANCE

By International News Service.

New York, March 4.—With the sense of equilibrium destroyed for some months to come and permanently deaf in his left ear, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will leave the Roosevelt Hospital tomorrow and later in the week will go to his home in Oyster Bay.

How serious the Colonel's illness has been became known for the first time when the final bulletin on his condition was issued by his physician.

This bulletin also revealed that the vigor of the Colonel will not down, despite his new handicaps. It was made known not long ago that the ex-president is blind in one eye, the result of a boxing bout with an army officer, and it must be remembered that he was shot in the breast some years ago at Milwaukee.

The colonel will keep his speaking dates in Maine on March 28, and also will fill other engagements.

"For the last four years," said the final bulletin, "Colonel Roosevelt has intermittently suffereed from the after effects of his Brazilian exploration.

"The recent acute attack has given us the opportunity to remove the cause, probably completely, and we believe from the rapidity with which the incision has healed he is in an unusually vigorous condition and that he will speedily be in even better shape than before.

"While this condition was being treated he developed an acute infection of both middle ears which necessitated an incision of both drum membranes. Infection spread to the internal ear on the left side and probably permanently destroyed all hearing functions.

"In other words, it will be some months before he will recover complete control of equilibrium or before he will cease to find himself dizzy at quick or unexpected emotions.

"For the next fortnight he ought to rest so that he may recover from the effects of the operations."

MOTOR CAR HAS EMANCIPATED MILLIONS

J. G. Utterback Emphasizes Its Function in Every Walk of Life

By J. G. UTTERBACK, of the Utterback-Gleason Co., Dort Distributors.

Here in New England, above any part of the United States, the passenger car is regarded as essential. Our cities are comparatively near to each other and we have a splendid system of improved highways to encourage motoring.

The consequence is, that all classes of business find their operating zones widened. For the manufacturing and jobbing houses thousands of cars traverse the New England territory unbound by inflexible railroad time tables and thus covering many times more ground than otherwise would be possible.

The cry of today is for man-power, not only to subdue the Hun, but to effectively back our boys in France with telling support behind the lines.

The automobile has emancipated millions. It has made it possible for city people to live in the remote suburbs and thus enjoy the pure, clean air of the open country.

The great war has caused the public to scrutinize carefully the relation of every manufactured article to the efficient conduct of necessary affairs. From this test, the automobile has emerged triumphant.

R. P. Page, Jr., the manager of the Boston Factory Branch of the Autocar Company, in commenting on the very great increase in the sale of autocars during the past year, says: "The unprecedented difficulties that surround shipping by rail have undoubtedly had a very great effect in stimulating the sale of motor trucks, and we firmly believe that hundreds of business houses that may have bought trucks because of temporary conditions have become so dependent on their own delivery service that they will increase their fleets no matter what conditions exist.

"The Autocar has come in for a very large share of this increased business. We attribute our tremendous volume of sales in and near Boston not only to the fact that thousands of Autocars are working effectively day in and day out, but also to the fact that we have been developing to a greater and greater extent the facilities for rendering complete and satisfactory after-sale service to Autocar users.

"Embargoes and freight congestion have indeed increased the utility of the motor truck—they have also impressed on the mind of the truck owner that he must look to the manufacturer to make it possible for him to keep his truck up to the highest degree of efficiency. The fact that we are able to keep up a system of night and day repair service has meant a tremendous amount of Autocar users, during these days of transportation problems.

"The outlook for the sale of reliable motor trucks looks brighter to us now than at any other show time—trucks have come up to the scratch in a great national emergency, and new uses for them are developing every day. Good roads is becoming the gospel of the nation, the State and the local community; the man who tries to set a limit on the future of the truck tackles a pretty knotty problem."

CADILLAC SERVICE FLAG BEARS 935 BLUE STARS

Nine hundred thirty-five men in the service of the army and navy is the record of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, as indicated by a service flag which was exhibited at the New York and Chicago national automobile shows, and which now hangs in the Cadillac factory.

According to Cadillac officials, some of the men who have gone are foremen and skilled mechanics who have been on the Cadillac payroll for several years. A large number of these have found their way into similar lines, both in the construction and repair of airplane engines and as service men for the various motor transport units.

The Cadillac Company is contributing to the military establishment of the Allies with automobiles as well as men. Olive drab Cadillac Eights are now a common sight in France, and many more are now being shipped from the Cadillac factory at Detroit.

RESCUE SOUTH BOSTON BOY ADRIFT ON ICE

Lad Calls for Mother as Cake Splits, Blowing Out to Sea

Crying for his mother as a strong west wind was carrying him out to sea on a small cake of ice, Joseph Connell of No. 4 Norcross place, South Boston, was rescued just as the ice split by the force of the waves.

He barely had strength to hang to the ice, so terrifying was his experience.

When he was pulled into a rescue boat he pleaded:

"Just let me see my mother once more!"

Connell, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Connell, left home early and was soon playing along the shore at the foot of K street. Venturing on to the ice, he made his way further out. Suddenly the ice broke, and the piece on which he was standing started down the harbor. It was almost to Squantum before rescuers located him.

Another boy saw the accident and told men at the Mosquito Fleet Yacht Club.

James Flannery of No. 777 Broadway and Thomas McCarthy of No. 624 Eighth street, both seventeen, launched a skiff and went to the rescue. McCarthy is a cousin of Connell, but did not know it was his cousin on the ice cake until he had saved him.

The two boys had a long and hard row to catch up with the fast-drifting ice cake, which was then rounding Cow Pasture Point. When they were within fifty feet of Connell, they saw that he was nearly ready to let go. His fingers were dug into the ice, and the waves were piling over him. Then the ice cake split and Connell nearly went under. In another minute he was safe in the skiff, and the two boys pulled for the L Street Baths.

Superintendent John J. Donovan and George Cudahey were waiting on the landing and soon had the half-drowned boy in condition to be taken home, apparently none the worse for his experience.

QUICK AND ECONOMICAL TRANSPORTATION
Nash Trucks Prevent Hauling Delays
Your business is protected against hauling delays when Nash trucks are carrying your loads.
Congested freight conditions have made your hauling problem more vital than ever before. The one solution seems to be a greatly increased use of high grade motor trucks such as the Nash.
For long range hauling between cities, as well as for a greatly extended transportation service within the city itself, Nash trucks are especially adapted.
They are unusually powerful, dependable and economical in the hardest service. Equipped with automatic locking differentials, they get through where other trucks not possessing this important feature cannot go.
This automatic differential is an equalizer of power. If for any reason one driving wheel loses traction momentarily, its mate gets practically all the power and pulls the truck out of difficulty.
Let a Nash transportation expert show you which Nash truck will best fit your hauling needs.

DEALERS REPORT OPENING DAY'S BUSINESS BRISK

By C. F. DONNOCKER.

The weather was more than usually favorable for the opening of the Boston Auto Show, and the crowds which flocked to Mechanics Building were as enthusiastic as any which have been seen in many years. It was demonstrated early in the afternoon that this is to be a regular selling show.

Many of the dealers reported sales made both in the afternoon and evening last Saturday and with such an auspicious beginning the record for sales ought to be very gratifying, if not in excess of last year.

The show itself is one never to be forgotten. The decorations are superb and the orchestral selections are of the highest quality, affording an entertaiment in themselves well worth hearing.

As an exhibition of the latest designs in motor car manufacture this show is easily a leader of any held this year. The Boston show, coming as it does later than the other big events, gives the manufacturers more time to complete their show models, and this is especially true in respect to special colorings in the bodies.

As a result, some of the models shown are painted in the very latest hues which are designed to meet the whims of the most fastidious, yet of such colors that miladi's gowns can match the handsome upholstering of her brougham.

If the attendance Saturday night can be taken as a criterion, the number of people who will visit the show this week will probably surpass that of last season and at the same time the whole crowd seems to be in a buying mood. In fact, buying a motor car this year is contagious, and many sales were made to people who did not really come to the show with the intention of buying at that time.

The number of pre-show orders which have poured into John L. Judd from all parts of New England for the Smith Universal attachment indicate that the volume of business that will be handled by salesmen and dealers at the Boston show in Smith Form-a-Trucks will beat all records.

Business men everywhere in this section are fast recognising that in the Universal attachment the solution to the moving of all kinds of goods is rapidly disappearing.

The feature of the new Smith Universal Hangar which is making the strongest appeal to merchants, farmers and those engaged in hauling is the extreme simplicity and the additional fact that it is so easy to attach to any old car provided it has shaft drive and channel steel frame. No expert mechanical skill is required to attach it, nor is anything like an extensive equipment of tools required. No machining is necessary.

EASILY CONVERTED.

Axle and housing of the car to be converted simply are sawed off to the proper length with a hack saw, a process which anyone can do, and as no reduction by machining is necessary the axle is not weakened in any way, and the job of fitting the new Universal is so simplified that anyone who possesses even a slight knowledge of tools can accomplish it.

The mechanical features of the new Smith Universal are correct and approved from an engineering point of view. They represent an evolution which has been in process of development ever since the first Smith Form-a-Truck attachment was produced, and every step on the way has been thought out with care, tested rigidly and executed with mechanical precision.

TO BUILD OVER 36,000.

Material and manufacturing arrangements have been perfected whereby the Smith Motor Truck Corporation will build a minimum of 36,000 Smith Form-a-Truck units during 1918.

Considering the enormous demand there will be for motor trucks during the coming twelve months, and the limitations on production and delivery which will handicap the manufacturers of standard trucks, the extraordinary facility in manufacture possessed by this company has commanding importance.

It means that thousands of business men will be relieved of their hauling burdens at such a time when such relief is an absolute necessity for them. Also it will mean that the Smith Form-a-Truck dealers will be the most important factors in the commercial car business of their respective communities.

AUTO ESSENTIAL FOR SPEEDING UP WORLD

Just as Necessary Now as Railroad, Telegraph and the Telephone

By C. P. ROCKWELL.

So closely has the motor car become identified with present day American life that it requires but a moment's consideration to realize that it is just as necessary an institution as the telephone, the telegraph or the railroad.

Perhaps the most obvious, as well as the most important, role of the automobile is that of a time-saver. In this hustling country of ours time is an all important element. To Europeans the speed with which Americans put through their projects has always been a marvel.

It was America that first conceived the possibility of sending a locomotive speeding at sixty miles an hour. And it was America that first applied the motor car to the task of increasing the efficiency of modern business. Through its offices we have speeded up transportation, widened operating radii and made distance no longer a matter of miles but a matter of minutes.

WHAT WITHOUT THEM?

Imagine, if you can, an America without motor cars and you will have an America seriously hampered commercially. Can you picture the rush hour traffic, so familiar a part of our modern life, transformed suddenly to a tangled jam of horse-drawn vehicles? The smooth deftness with which the traffic policeman handles the swift moving craft would be impossible, and the accomplishment now a matter of hours would be drawn out into days.

More and more the importance of the automobile as applied to business life has been made apparent. But the city man holds no monopoly on the automobile. The farmer, who formerly depended on his horse and buggy as a means of transportation from farm to city, now sits at the wheel of his automobile and makes the trip in a fraction of the time formerly required under the old regime.

SPEED THE PHYSICIAN.

The medical profession as a whole has adopted the motor car. Every doctor drives his car Winter and Summer while making his daily professional calls. Were he dependent on the horse and buggy his working radius would be seriously hampered. Incidentally, if an emergency call comes in, when quick response may mean the saving of a human life, the physician's red cross on his radiator permits him to exceed the speed limit and rush first aid when it is needed.

Consider how our cities reflect the influence of the motor car. Suburban towns have sprung up miles from the business centres, their inhabitants depending almost entirely on automobiles. The hansom cab has almost disappeared from our city streets. Swift fleets of taxi cabs, stationed at the various depots, distribute transients to all parts of the great cities without loss of time.

People buy cars now because they need them; because it will make them more efficient members of society; because it will save time and money. The man without a car cannot successfully compete with the man who operates an automobile. The function of the automobile today is an economic one, pure and simple. It is a vital part of our daily lifes. It has speeded up transit; it has brought thousands of miles of good roads; it has become a necessity.

New Holmes Machine Given a Remarkable Test of 594 Miles

Practical proof of the service qualities of the new Holmes car is ready for those practical men and women who go to see it every day in the Boston show.

Arthur Holmes, designer of the car and president of the Holmes Automobile Company, recently drove the car to Philadelphia and New York from the factory at Canton, Ohio, in a remarkable test trip of 594 miles.

What might have been called theories of the service value of the car, shown to the Boston public for the first time this week, have been turned into well authenticated facts by the records of Mr. Holmes's test trip.

The trip set the final seal of "workability" on the carefully perfected air cooling system of the car. Although the engine had never been run, even on a block, before it was cranked up for the start from Canton, there was absolutely no engine trouble during the entire trip and no sign of overheating.

The car climbed long, slippery hills in first and second gear, and the engine frequently ran idle when stops were made to inquire the way or dig out a road through drifted snow. Yet the engine would not kick over even when the switch was thrown at the top of long, steep grades. In the most difficult circumstances, therefore, the air cooling system of the Holmes car has proved itself an insurance against ignition by overheating.

The extraordinary rough roads also served as an acid test for the riding comfort of the car. Mr. Holmes says that it is entirely free from vibration owing to the length of the wheelbase 126 inches. Yet because of its balance and flexibility the car negotiated with perfect safety the hairpin curves of Alleghany Mountain trails. Fourteen thousand miles of life for each tire of the Holmes car is confidently prophesied, and an indication of this tire economy is to be found in the fact that the tire chains put on in Canton and not removed for 594 miles showed practically no signs of wear when New York was reached.

The test trip fixes beyond doubt the average mileage of the car at sixteen miles per gallon of gasoline. The car did thirteen miles to the gallon when it was bucking snow, ice, high winds, high grades and frequent stops with the engine running. As for oil consumption, that brand-new, stiff, hard motor used little more than a gallon of lubricating oil for nearly 600 miles.

EXPECT ARREST SOON IN BLIND MAN ROBBERY

The police of Station No. 13, Hyde Park, have received information which they expect will shortly lead to the arrest of the man who, a few days ago, went into the store of John Vernon, the blind man in Cleary square, Hyde Park, and, after ordering the helpless man to throw up his hands, pilfered the cash till of $5.

REDUCE PRIOR PURCHASE EVERETT HIGH TICKETS

At a meeting of the Suburban High School Athletic League held at the Everett High School, it was voted to reduce the price of admission tickets to the game to twenty cents each, if purchased prior to the date of the game. Gate admissions sold on the day of the game will remain at twenty-five cents.

'TOURSTER' AND 'SPORTSTER' NOVELTIES

There Is Also a New Roadster Among the 1918 Cole Eights

"In embarking on the fourth consecutive year of production devoted exclusively to the building of the celebrated Cole Eight, the Cole Motor Car Company, of Indianapolis, announces the most complete and diversified line of models that it has ever offered," says Bryant G. Smith, local distributor.

"Since the Cole Eight made its debut in January, 1915, the career of the car has been crowded with big achievements. However, at no time has a more radical, yet logical, improvement in design been inaugurated than the one which characterizes the styles adopted for the three additions to the line shown for the first time at the show this year.

"AEROTYPE" DESIGNS.

"The three new Cole Eights which take their places beside the standard touring car, Tuxedo Foursome, Four-Door Toursedan and Tourcoupe are a Tourster, a Sportster and a roadster.

"Being absolutely new in their conception, these additons to the Cole line are designated by a term heretofore unknown to the motorwise. They are said to be of the 'aerotype' design, and an inspection of the cars is sufficient to justify the use of the term.

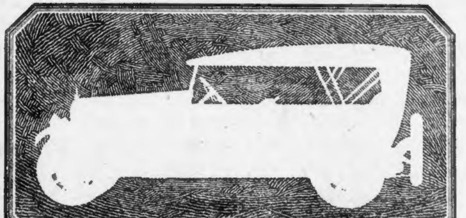
"As graceful in their poise as a monoplane, with low beveled side panels, massive fenders, high cowls and sharp, keen lines, they have about them a martial individuality that is instantly appealing.

"Another feature of Cole construction for the current year, however, is one that motorists will give serious consideration to in view of present conditions. It is doubtful whether any company ever has given more attention to the small refinements and details than that which characterize the production of the Cole this year. Custom-made cars can offer the buyer little more.

ALL WELL FINISHED.

"From the new patented tire and wheel carrier at the rear to the double door locks, nothing that typifies good taste and correct form has been forgotten.

"The Tourster is finished in deep blue with wheels to match. The fenders, running board shields and radiator are in black. The wide rear seat, two auxiliary seats and front seat are upholstered in black long grain leather fashioned into French folds. In the tonneau rich velvet carpet is used, and such appointments as step light, clock, plate glass curtain windows, convenient vanity case and long, accessible brake and control levers are among the outstanding features."



The Cole Aero-EIGHT

The imagination cannot supply the details that give to the Cole Aero-Eight its individuality and charm.

The car itself must be seen to be appreciated. It defies description.

The throngs which have gathered to see it on display at the Automobile Shows have bestowed on it their superlative praise.

For the Cole Aero-Eight has been the outstanding feature wherever it has been exhibited.

It represents a radical departure in automobile designing and sponsors a new vogue that has met with instant favor.

Climbing

¶ You're on tour in the mountains. Trails tilted almost on end, forbidding ascents that show up the true colors of your car. ¶ The rush of power from the energetic 83 horsepower motor of the Standard "8" is equal to the sternest climb. You soar on pinions of power up perilous cliff-sides. You hit the grade at 30 miles per hour. And behold, the little needle is still at 30 when you reach the top. Or throttle down and see what she'll do. Watch your speedometer—10 miles an hour, 5, 3, 1½. It hardly seems possible—and your gear is still in "high." Yet not a sign of laboring. Now give her gas. Forget your gears. Gathering speed like a bird or aeroplane, you complete your climb in a whirl of 40—or even 50-mile-an-hour strainless motion. ¶ As safe for touring after 50,000 miles as after 1,000. ¶ Made by Standard Steel Car Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.

DON'T SUFFER WITH NEURALGIA

Use Soothing Musterole

When those sharp pains go shooting through your head, when your skull seems as if it would split, just rub a little Musterole on your temples and neck. It draws out the inflammation, soothes away the pain, usually giving quick relief.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment, made with oil of mustard. Better than a mustard plaster and does not blister.

Many doctors and nurses frankly recommend Musterole for sore throat, bronchitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet—colds of the chest (it often prevents pneumonia). It is always dependable.

PEEL OFF CALLUSES

Here's Magic! Instant Relief Without Pain

"Hard skin" or callus spots on the sides or the bottom of the feet peel right off without pain or soreness, after you apply a little Freezone, says a Cincinnati authority. This ether drug loosens the dead callused skin so it peels off with the fingers.

A quarter ounce of Freezone costs but a few cents at any pharmacy, but is sufficient to remove every corn or callus from one's feet. This is the only way to free the feet from corns and calluses without soreness, danger or infection.

After the corn or callus is lifted away the skin beneath is pink and healthy, and not sore, tender or even irritated.

Rupture Kills 7,000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance, or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore, cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., Block 292, St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and the instructive information necessary. —Advertisement.

TIMBER MEN REFUSE TO BE SCAPEPGOATS

Washington, March 4.—"We refuse longer to be the scapegoat for the gonvernment's shipbuilding blunders," says the Southern Pine Association in a statement announcing that its members accused by the shipping board of failing to make deliveries of contracts will tell their side of the story Tuesday, March 12, before the Senate Commerce Committee.

In addition to citing delays and difficulty, for which the association blames the shipping board, the Southern timber men promise "revelations of a sensational character concerning their struggle against sabotage and incendiarism of alien enemies."

CALL ON JEWS TO ASSIST IN WAR

Young Zionists Told Allied Victory Will Mean State of Palestine

Plans for the enrollment of the Jewish youth of Massachusetts in the Zionist movement were discussed at a State-wide conference of representatives of all the junior Zionist organizations of the State held at the headquarters of the West End Young Men's Hebrew Association, No. 17 Mt. Vernon street. The assembly was held under the auspices of the Junior Zionist Council of Massachusetts.

A resolution to the effect that an American and an Allied victory will mean the realization of the 2000-year-old dream for the establishment of a Jewish State in Palestine and calling upon all the Jewish young men and women to do everything in their power to help the nation in its prosecution of the war was adopted at the opening session.

Resolutions were also adopted urging all the members of the Junior Zionist Council of the State to study Hebrew and to observe all the Jewish holidays.

The purposes of the convention were two-fold. First, to reorganize and to strengthen the work of this constituent and representative body. Second, to formulate new plans by which the Junior Zionist clubs of the State will be able to accept or reject any proposition put to them.

The principal address at the opening session was delivered by S. Borowsky of New York, who greeted the Massachusetts delegates on behalf of the national of Young Judea. He spoke about the great work being done in other cities of this country on behalf of this great movement for the restoration of Palestine.

Miss Sarah Cooperstock, president of the Junior Zionist Council of the State, read a paper on "Reorganization." She stated that the Massachusetts Council, which has been in existence for a number of years and held a conspicuous place among the Jewish councils of America, is now again seeking the support of the Jewish youth of the State.

The convention was concluded with a mass meeting held at the Temple Mishkan Tefila, Copeland and Moreland streets, Roxbury. Speakers included Dr. M. Eichler, director of the New England Zionist Bureau; Louis E. Kirstein, chairman of the Zion Association of Greater Boston; Dr. De Sola Pool of New York; Rabbi Abraham Nowak of the Temple Ohabei Shalom, and Rabbi Herman H. Rubenovitz of the Temple Mishkan Tefila. Miss Cooperstock presided.

The committee in charge of the conference included B. I. Levine, Miss S. Cooperstock, Miss S. Winer, Miss E. L. Maltross, Miss L. Schlossberg, Miss Libby Jacobson, David Bond and M. N. Fisher.

Now, All Together!

DO YOU know all the war songs our soldier lads are singing? Some are new but catchy; some are like those of the days of '61, and they're all inspiring. They have a swing and a dash that is irresistible.

Sing these war songs at home—at school—whistle them—teach the youngsters the songs our boys are singing in camp and trench.

Next Sunday, March 10, you will be given a FREE copy of the OFFICIAL ARMY SONGS, containing the songs selected by the army cheer leaders to inspire our boys to victory. Make good use of the book—get into step with the Boys in Khaki—sing THEIR songs.

The Songs They Sing at Camp Devens

"Over There"—by George M. Cohan
"Homeward Bound"
"Good-Bye Broadway, Hello, France"
"Send Me a Curl"

The Songs They Sing in the Trenches

Then, when things have been livened up, sing the other inspiring songs in the song book.

Bright Baseball Outlook

HUGH FULLERTON STARTS "SPRING DOPE"

Upsets Due in Big Leagues

THIS is the first of Hughie Fullerton's series of Spring stories. The AMERICAN'S famous baseball expert, most original of all writers and king of diamond statisticians, has a whole lot to say and is going to say it in typical Fullerton style. It will be a great series! don't miss it. The next installment will appear tomorrow.

Never before in the history of baseball have so many problems arisen to complicate the major league season. Even the Brotherhood uprising, the American League invasion, the Federal League assault, failed to smash the major league teams, to upset the dope, and to make the uncertainty of the season so great as the world war has done.

We will see twelve practically remodeled ball clubs in action and the other four, less wounded by loss of men, have been hit in vital spots.

Managers have discarded old ideas—some have discarded practically entire ball clubs.

Some, for financial reasons, have trimmed down to the essentials and will experiment with cheaper, and possibly more sensational, material.

The season of 1918 promises to be the most interesting in the history of modern baseball.

Probably the brand of baseball exhibited will not be as good, but there is an even greater chance that it will be better, from the standpoint of the spectator, than it has been in a long time.

PLAYERS JARRED BY CUTS.

Salaries have been cut. Players, who have been too prosperous to pay attention to their own business have been jarred by salary cuts and the prospects of more salary cuts.

The golden age of baseball has passed and this is thrift year year for certain.

The owners finally have waked to the fact that the public doesn't give a darn for stars who will not hustle and that the fans would rather watch a bunch of fighting, hard-working young fellows battling to win than to see the most perfect brand of ball turned out by spiritless and self-satisfied stars.

Besides the situation, as we face it in early March, there is the strong probability that the government will call upon a number of the athletes during the season.

This adds an incentive to all clubs to keep hustling.

A club with ten games in the lead may lose two great pitchers in the Conscription, and tumble down to join the second division teams.

HOW THE CLUBS STAND.

Several clubs will start the season relying mainly upon men who are in the first call.

This adds to the uncertainty and to the interest of the major league races. Last year the only hope of any National League club was that the Giants would be caught in a train wreck.

The American League was in much the same class, only Chicago and Red Sox really figured to have a chance.

We find another condition: In the National League, Cincinnati and St. Louis, after long periods of bad ball clubs, seem to have a real chance to get into the pennant races, and the Chicago Cubs, having spent a fortune for players, figure to challenge the Giants' right to the championship.

In the American League, the Red Sox, after being riddled and almost destroyed by loss of men to the army and navy, has rebuilt the team until it forms a formidable opponent to the World's Champion White Sox.

HARD JOB FOR DOPESTERS.

All this is pretty tough on the poor dopester. It makes his task this Spring harder than he ever has known.

First, he must figure on remodeled teams; and second, he must calculate as to the chances of certain men who are vital to the interests of teams being called to the colors.

Let us suppose cases: Cleveland, already shot to pieces by the draft and by volunteering, has managed to reassemble a team, grouped around Tris Speaker, which may upset the calculations of Boston and Chicago.

Yet there is Wambsganss listed for the first call. Without Wambsganss what chance would Cleveland stand?

There is the Chicago White Sox. The pitching staff has been hit hard, and, although the team remains practically intact, what if Faber, who is in the first call, be summoned during the height of the season?

REDS HURT BY THE WAR.

There is Cincinnati, and the case of the Reds constitutes a tragedy.

The Reds have waited two generations for a chance at the pennant.

They have a team which, for the first time in many years, promises to give them a chance to win.

Yet the strength of that team depends largely upon two men—Toney and Eller—and both men are in the first list to be called when the nation needs more men.

Take the Chicago Cubs: Weeghman has spent a lot of money and has spread a lot of the C. Webb Murphy brand of manure to make and press agent a team which depends largely upon pitching to win.

He bought Grover Cleveland Alexander at a stupendous price—and Alexander is in the first class to be called on if the nation needs more men.

The fact is, there is scarcely a team in either major league that would be able to hold within two places of where the present dope places it if the draft hit them in vital spots.

The conscription may make second division clubs out of teams that figure up at the top, but, by the same process, it may place tail-end clubs up near the top.

It may equalize the race after it seems over, and it adds the zest of uncertainty to races that might be figured as over before they start.

Britt and De Foe in Chelsea Ring

PROGRAM AT DOUGLAS A. A.

Semi-Final—Paul Demers of New Bedford vs. K. O. Circus of Pittsburgh; ten rounds.

Curtain-Raiser — Billy Carney of New Bedford vs. Battling Downey of Roxbury; ten rounds.

By RINGSIDE.

Frankie (Young) Britt of New Bedford, hero of a hundred or so hard ring battles, stacks up against one of the toughest customers of his career in Billy De Foe of St. Paul, at the Douglas A. A. of Chelsea tonight. The bout is scheduled for twelve rounds.

The St. Paul youngster had made a decided hit with New England boxing fans since coming East and is going better than ever right now, as shown by his recent victory over Phinney Boyle.

Britt is in excellent shape, however, and if the boys perform according to schedule, the fistic lovers are sure to see one hard fought battle.

K. O. Circus of Pittsburgh meets Paul Demers in the semi-final event and this, like the main muss, is sure to bring the fans to their feet.

The rise of the Whaling City boy has been little short of sensational, having met and defeated some of the best boys in his class in the past six months.

In addition to the above scraps, Billy Carney of New Bedford and Battling Downey of Roxbury will come together. This bout should prove a good one as both boys like to stand toe to toe and swap punches.

The card at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night brings four local boys together in the feature and semi-final bouts, Gilbert Gallant of Chelsea boxing Harry Carlson of Brockton in the final number, with Johnny Buckley of South Boston swapping punches with Johnny Noonan of Dorchester.

DENVER SPORTS LAYING ODDS OF 4 TO 1 FULTON WILL KAYO MEEHAN

DENVER, March 4.—Fred Fulton, Rochester, Minn., heavyweight, who is in line to get a championship booking with Jess Willard, meets Willie Meehan, roly-poly Californian, at the Stock Yards Auditorium here tonight. The fight is scheduled for fifteen rounds—or less. The less is put in advisedly, as Denver sports are offering odds of 4 to 1 Fulton will kayo Meehan.

Meehan gave it out upon his arrival here that he has enlisted in the navy and this will be his last fight before he goes fighting for Uncle Sam.

FLEET FIELD SURE GO IN KENTUCKY DERBY

Louisville, March 4.—There has not been in years so many high-class Kentucky Derby candidates as there are for this year's renewal. Last year there were Omar Khayyam, Ticket, Midway, Cudgel and several other flyers.

This year there are Sun Briar, Papp, Escoba, War Cloud, Jack Hare, Jr., and Rosie O'Grady among many other famous juveniles.

There is some disappointment felt that Major August Belmont's Lucullite was not made an eligible, and over John Sanford's failure to enter Tippity Witchet.

ARMORY A. A. MATCHES DUNDEE AND WELLING

Johnny Dundee of New York and Joe Welling of Chicago, two of the live wires in the lightweight division, have been matched by the Armory A. A. to meet in the twelve-round feature event Tuesday night, March 12. The announcement is made that the two battlers have signed to come in at 133 pounds at 9 a. m.

Welling hooks up with Johnny Griffiths, now operating under the management of Nate Lewis and Tommy Walsh, at Akron, O., tonight.

Schoolboy Stars Battle on Track in Four-Day Meet

The schoolboy regimental track and field meet will open Wednesday afternoon at the High School of Commerce gymnasium. Thursday the meet will be continued at the East Armory and continue until Saturday afternoon, when the finals in all events will be contested.

Of recent years, the boys have complained about the slippery condition of the Armory floor for the jump events, and, after reviewing conditions, the committee decided upon the Fenway gymnasium.

Because of its brilliant showing in recent meets, the High School of Commerce team will enter the games a slight favorite, with two real competitors for honors in Boston Latin and English High. If the Buff and Blue intermediates and juniors can hold their own, Commerce ought to come through. Coach Sherlock has a galaxy of young stars, and is entertaining hopes that the lads will come up to his expectations.

Few experts expect to see any records broken but it would not be surprising if the 300 yard senior record of :36 1-5 was lowered. Macchia of English, Allen Colvin of Commerce and Kennedy of Latin should finish well bunched in this event.

If Earl Dudley of Latin is in his usual good form in the 1,000-yard event, he may be able to clip a few seconds off the present mark. He is considered one of the most consistent of the schoolboy distance runners.

There is some extra fine talent slated for the hurdle events. James of Commerce and Wing of Latin are looked upon as possible winners.

Honors in the high jump should fall to English with a representative of the calibre of Feeney. He is one of the best schoolboy leapers of the present day. Still few expect that he will lower the record held by Bill Davis.

Two Commerce lads loom up brightly in the dash and 60-yard events. Wansker has been going at a fine clip in the former, while Jake Driscoll should win the distance event easily.

Warsaw at Best, Says Bert Collyer

COLLYER'S HOT SPRINGS SELECTIONS FOR TODAY

1—Paul Connelly, Green Grass, Miss Bryn.
2—Frank Burke, Dienero, Magikon.
3—Warsaw, Berlin, Lottery.
4—Top o' th' Morning, Butterscotch II., Soule entry.
5—Ella Ryan, Borgo, Lady Little.
6—Merchant, Mystic Folly, Fairy Legend.

Most probable winner—WARSAW.

By BERT E. COLLYER.

Warsaw, the pickler to be yanked out of the brine barrel on this occasion, is none other than Fred Good's smart campaigner. The boys at the track think it's only a question of how far he will win by.

If you don't think this bird is fit, just lamp the way he mizzled down the long stretch the other morning with high weight up—:23, :47, 1:15.

He goes in the third race and will have Robinson in the pilot house. Berlin is next best, and just cannot be worse than second. Lottery ought to trim Hondo for the short end of the purse.

Paul Connelly's last race was a hummer. A repeater of that effort will be good enough to win the opening dash. Green Grass is all over the contender. Under strong handling the latter might spill the beans. Miss Bryn and Lady Eileen have the peep money between them.

Ol' Pop Schorr is going to uncover another sleeper. On this occasion it's Frank Burke in the second race. This bird has been burning up the track in secret trials, and, if he's not a morning glory of the worst kind he will win over the cheap band of barkers opposing him.

Dienero, on works, must be given a chance. He is fit. Magikon will bear watching. Here's a sleeper from sleeperville.

This way weighted, and in his good form, it's going to take a real hoss to trim old Top O' th' Morning. He should be on the front end of the procession all the way in the fourth. Butterscotch II. ran a good race last time out. The Soule entry—Paddy Whack and Pullux—is sure to be knocking at the door. Jock Scot is the dangerous outsider. Tab this bird closely.

Straight from the feed-box comes the info. That Ella Ryan seems to have been dropped into an easy spot and, with clear sailing, should be on the bill daily all the way.

Borgo is cherry ripe and sure to go well. Lady Little about holds the balance safe.

Merchant is best in the last race, has nothing much to trim, and will have the advantage of a good rider. Mystic Folly came to life with a rattle the last time out and rolled home. He is all over the Contender here and just cannot be worse than second. Fairy Legend has a chance to be at Pleasureville for third.

MYSTIC VALLEY LEAGUE TO ARRANGE SCHEDULES

For the purpose of arranging the 1916 baseball and football schedules, a meeting of the Mystic Valley Interscholastic Baseball and Football League has been called by President Charles L. Curtis, principal of Winchester High School, for tomorrow afternoon. Arlington, Lexington, Melrose, Watertown and Winchester High schools, who hold franchises, will be represented at the session.

Melrose High entered the circuit last week, being allowed to resign for a period of three years by the Suburban League, in order "catch its breath," so to speak.

Managers R. M. Lloyd of Harvard, W. A. Buell of Princeton and F. S. Hyde of Yale met in New Haven yesterday and agreed upon the baseball dates for this Spring. As Harvard and Princeton are to close a trifle earlier than usual this season, it was decided that only a two-game series should be played.

Harvard will not award the "H" to its players. Yale and Princeton have not yet decided what they will do with their varsity heroes.

Red Sox Squad Start for South Next Saturday

The Red Sox squad will get away at noon next Saturday. As matters stand to date the squad departing from South Station will be limited to Hon. Babe Ruth, so far as actual talent goes; Secretary Graver and the war correspondents.

At Albany Johnny Evers and Pitcher McCabe will join the party. Other warriors will be picked up en route, while at St. Louis, next Sunday night, a bunch of the boys who hibernate in the Middle West are to climb aboard to the Red Sox Pullman.

COAST BOYS GO DIRECT.

Same as always, Hooper, Leonard and the other Californians will go direct to the Ozarks training camp from their respective distant homes. Carl Mays, demon hurler, has been Wintering on his farm near Springfield, Mo. He has sent word he will pick up Babe Ruth, Evers, et al., when they roll into St. Louis.

Last Fall Frazee and Barry stated that they would bar the wives of the players on the Southern trip. Barry states that he likes the order and that it remains in effect.

In the Braves' camp the first delegation will hit out Southward tomorrow night. The delegation down to leave from the Hub includes John Henry, new catcher and a most valuable addition to the Stallings clan, Art Nehf, reliable southpaw, who has been in Boston all Winter, and Johnny Murray, the Everett semi-pro hurling phenom, who looks so good to the Miracle Man that he is going to be given his chance to shine in the big show without taking the usual course of sprouts in the minors.

DROP OFF AT HADDOCK.

This trio, chaperoned by Master Jack Slattery, the new Fred Mitchell of the camp, is to drop off at Stallings' plantation at Haddock, Ga., for a little visit before proceeding on to the camp at Miami. Stallings also will entertain the bulk of his other battery boys.

President Haughton, who announced Saturday that he had signed twenty-one of his twenty-seven players, is keeping the identity of his hold-outs to himself. It is pretty well understood, however, that Charley Herzog, Ed Konetchy and Dick Rudolph, three of the club's mainstays, are included among the six hold-outs.

Be that as it may, Haughton refuses to do any worrying. He claims he has toted fair with all his players and is confident that all of them, Herzog included, will have swung into the fold by the time the first workout is taken down in sunny Florida.

PASSPORTS SOUGHT BY DAVE ASTEY'S MANAGER

New York, March 4.—Joe Jacobs, manager of Dave Astey, who is scheduled to meet Jim Wilde for the lightweight title in Liverpool May 6, has returned from Washington, where he made formal application for three passports.

FULTON-DEMPSEY BOUT IN EAST, IS REPORT

New York, March 4.—A purse of $25,000 for a bout between Fred Fulton and Jack Dempsey at some place within easy travelling distance of New York, has been offered by Joe and Hugh Leblang, it was reported today.

The Leblang brothers are after a fifteen-round match to a decision.

KEMP NAMED MANAGER OF ARLINGTON H. S. NINE

Erford Kemp, 1918, has been appointed student manager of the Arlington High School baseball team. Dr. William T. McCarty will coach the nine. He has delayed cage work for the battery candidates until the close of the hockey season, March 15.

John Cadagan, last year's captain, will be back on the team, and will probably be reelected.

JAMES J. CORBETT.

"JOHN L." AS I KNEW HIM

BY JAMES J. CORBETT.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN

THIS is the thirteenth chapter of a series which James J. Corbett is writing on "John L. as I Knew Him." It relates many heretofore unpublished incidents in the life of the great warrior. The next instalment will appear tomorrow.

John L. Sullivan's second appearance in San Francisco was late in 1886, when he fought Paddy Ryan. By that time I was regarded as one of the best boxers in the Olympic A. C., and also had grown out of my over-enthusiastic kid days. A youngster develops rather quickly between the ages of seventeen and twenty.

The first time I saw John L. in action, as related in a previous article, I sat in the gallery and to make sure that I was going to get a good seat, begged my way into the place six hours before the fight began.

But when Sullivan fought Ryan in 1886, I was the proud possessor of a ringside box seat. And, that night I was all "dolled" up in a natty suit of clothes, a nifty hat and I carried a cane. Oh, yes, I felt rather important.

But just the same, I was still wildly anxious to be introduced to John L., and to gain the honor of shaking his hand.

WATCHED FOR RING TRICK.

No one in the big audience watched the movements of the champion with greater interest than I did. Those were the days when some of my warmest friends in the club were telling me that I was destined soon to be a topnotcher in the ring.

And it was just about that time that Jack Dempsey had predicted "some day, Jim Corbett, you will be a champion."

So I followed every action of Sullivan in the hope that he might uncover some of the ring tricks that had helped to make him famous—and which I might copy.

Sullivan, in that second fight in San Francisco got a chance to show some of his terrific punching power. Ryan came into the open and fought him.

The big champion sent some smashing lefts and rights to the head and body of his ancient rival. Almost from the outset it was obvious that Ryan was doomed to defeat.

The bout was to go only four rounds, but it terminated in the third when Ryan went down—and stayed there—under a terrific right hand bombardment by the mighty champion.

RYAN REFUSED TO BOX.

The thought didn't enter my mind then that I might have a chance with Sullivan. Always, until along in the 90's, I felt that he was absolutely unbeatable.

But the showing of Ryan didn't impress me at all. In fact, I was so confident about it that I went to the Olympic Club the next day and made this request of one of the officials:

"Try to get Ryan to box me four rounds in this club. I think I can put up a pretty good showing against him."

The Olympic folks showed their faith in my ability during those early days by taking my proposition seriously and going to Ryan and putting it up to him." But Ryan's answer was:

FAILED TO SEE SULLIVAN.

The champion remained in San Francisco for several days after the fight and every waking hour of mine was devoted to trying to get an introduction to him. But I failed.

Every afternoon I would go to John L.'s hotel in the hope that I might meet someone there who knew Sullivan and would introduce me.

But Fortune wouldn't smile on me and John L. swung back toward the East with my ambition unrealized.

And it was a long, long time before I saw Sullivan again.

A short while after the Ryan bout, John L. went to Denver and fought a four round draw with Duncan McDonald. From there he journeyed to Chicago, remaining there for many weeks.

On January 18, 1887, he fought Patsy Cardiff in Minneapolis. John L. broke the radius of his arm in the sixth round with a punch to Cardiff's head and the contest was declared a draw.

THE KILRAIN CHALLENGE.

Upon his return to New York in the latter part of the Winter of 1886-1887, Sullivan was challenged by Jake Kilrain. The Kilrain defi called for a bare knuckle fight with London Prize Ring rules governing and for a $5,000 side bet.

John L. at once insisted upon a side bet of $10,000, probably figuring the sum was too great for Kilrain to put up. But he reckoned without Richard K. Fox.

Fox, an ardent admirer of Kilrain, at once informed Sullivan that he would put up the other $5,000. To show good faith he posted that amount.

For some time the match hung fire. Kilrain's friends asserted that John L. was trying to "duck" out.

At any rate, the challenge was not accepted by Sullivan at that time and when he received an offer to tour the British Isles he accepted and sailed for England October 27, 1887.

Black Jack's catching corps includes Art Rico of the Braves, Carroll of Holy Cross and Keefe, of Tufts.

At first base, Del Gainer will be at home, and a near neighbor will be Barry, himself, who will guard the second sack. Rabbit Maranville has his hooks on the shortfield position, while Mike McNally of the Sox, completes the All-Boston infield.

A Plea to the Nation's Girls

"IT costs forty cents a day to feed a soldier and we are to have three million men under arms. The daily food bill for the soldiers will be $1,200,000. I urge all the girls to help feed the men by planting."—Charles Pack, President Emergency Food Garden Commission.

This Day in Our History

THIS is the anniversary of the reduction of letter postage in 1885 to two cents per ounce. It had previously been three. The two-cent rate remained in force until recently, when it was raised to three for all save local postage to help pay war expense.

Criticism as a Tonic

AN ARTICLE FOR BUSINESS GIRLS TO READ

Don't Take It Amiss When Your Employer Says Something Intended for Your Own Good

By Eleanor Gilbert,

(Author of "The Ambitious Woman in Business.")

IF you can accept criticism without tears of peevishness you're a "good sport," in the parlance of the boys. If you can, on top of that, immediately make use of the criticism in a constructive way, you're a pearl among women and your employer shall praise you in the gates.

For if there is one place where we do not show our mental equality with men it is in this one regard: That most of us invariably spill emotion over a criticism so thickly we never get any benefit from the criticism. Unless a man is thick skulled or a boor he learns early to take a criticism in the right spirit, and he learns it in no gentle way. Boys "roast" each other roughly.

No man grows up without having been raked over the coals for some weakness or foible, not once, but many times, and men are so accustomed to being criticised that it does not touch their feelings, but their thought areas.

Not Correctly

But we poor women, grown up in an atmosphere deliberately adjusted to our "feelings," are rarely ever educated in the art of using criticism correctly. We're trained to be so polite that we would rather fib than criticise—a scheme that's excellent on proper occasions, but enervating as a moral diet. Where are the women that can stand the fire of criticism upright, open-eyed, unflinching, then turn around and put the new idea that the criticism suggests into action?

"You made a very undiplomatic statement in your letter to Donnelly," remarked the sales manager to the new correspondent who had charge of communications with salesmen. "See here," he continued, running his finger over several sentences in the carbon copy of the letter. And he pointed out two or three glaring lapses—remarks that were sure to "rile" the salesman she had written to and certain not to produce the effect at which she aimed.

But the new correspondent didn't notice. She went red and white by turns. Something "boiled" within her, as she afterward expressed it. "I understood you to say that you wanted me to make it emphatic that Mr. Donnelly could not quote the 5 per cent. cash discount any more," she explained stiffly. "I had to tell him that his orders contained more violations of our standard terms than any other salesman's on the staff."

Showed a Form

"But surely," persisted the sales manager, "you could have pointed out the error in his order without antagonizing him uselessly," and he pulled out of his desk a form letter for her to consult.

When she flounced out of the room she did not remember a single suggestion that the sales manager had made. All she knew was that she had been criticised and she resented it. She was thoroughly "peeved," and her "peeve" percolated into all the letters she typed for the next five hours, but the same letters were totally unaffect- by the suggestion which the sales manager had made.

What's the use of anybody ever going to the trouble of criticising if the net result is always and only to be "hurt feelings?" We might just as well wallow in our own defects and ignorance for the rest of our days.

The Hidden Hand

By ARTHUR B. REEVE

EPISODE 12

"The Eyes in the Wall"

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company.

"IF silence were golden," he said murderously, "you would be poorer than you are."

"I meant no offence," Sonia faltered; "I came to help you get the locket from Doris, so that the explosive packet may be opened and her identity established by the handprints it contains. I truly meant no offence."

"How does this interest you?"

"The Emperor has promised me political pardon if I help him find the girl of the prophecy. Doris trusts me, and with your aid I can win."

The Hidden Hand considered a moment and nodded to one of his men.

"Where is Verda?" he snapped.

"She has not returned since early morning."

The Hidden Hand rose and adjusted the gauntlet of death. He motioned Sonia to go ahead and gathering his men, followed her from the den.

In the apartment of the motherly housekeeper, who had offered her a home when Uncle Abner forced her from the Whitney house, Doris awaited the coming of Ramsay, who had telephoned a short time before. A rap sounded on the door and Doris ran joyfully and threw it open, expecting to see Ramsay. She drew back a little startled as the bowing, smiling figure of the Countess Sonia confronted her.

"I beg your pardon," began the Countess. "This intrusion is in your interest. I wish to examine the locket."

Doris eyed the Countess and closed the door. "You may examine it," she said and crossed into an adjoining bedroom, followed by the housekeeper.

"Don't trust that woman, dear," urged the housekeeper, as Doris picked up her hand bag from the dressing table.

In the living room, the Countess Sonia made sure that Doris was out of hearing. She jumped to the door and motioned down the hallway to the Hidden Hand. She was back in the room, standing unconcernedly by the table, full in the light of an old-fashioned oil lamp, when Doris re-entered with the housekeeper.

"Look out!" cried the housekeeper.

Doris turned to behold the Hidden Hand entering the room. As he advanced Doris gave back a step. There was a report and a flash from her hand-bag, as she had discharged the pistol she had concealed. The shot struck the lamp, which exploded in a blaze of oil, and Doris dashed into the bedroom and out on to the fire-escape, followed by the Hidden Hand, who struck down the housekeeper as she blocked his passage.

On the fire-escape Doris screamed for help and proceeded to climb toward the roof. She fired at the Hidden Hand, but her aim was wild. Down on the street Ramsay heard the shot and drew his revolver. He was unable to risk a shot for fear of hitting Doris, who was now climbing over the edge of the roof, with the Hidden Hand two stories below.

From the window rolled a yellow, stinging smoke as the housekeeper used a chemical fire extinguisher.

Coughing from the smoke, Doris tried to run over the roof, but stopped as she saw several of the emissaries crouching in wait on the next roof. Across from her, twenty feet away, was a slightly lower roof, which offered the only escape, if she could bridge the gap.

A sudden solution reached her. She seized the curving top of the ladder that reached the roof and pulled it free, setting the bottom of it on the platform of the fire-escape. She had not a moment to lose. If she could stand on the top rung and push herself free from the roof, the falling ladder would describe an arc as it shot outward toward the other roof. The sickening fear of height and the danger of such a flight held her powerless an instant. Then the greater fear of the Hidden Hand decided her. She braced herself and shot out into the air, falling.

The ladder crashed against the opposite roof, throwing her sprawling. Then, with a rebound, the ladder fell, gathering speed until it struck the ground and imbedded itself a foot in the street.

To Be Continued.

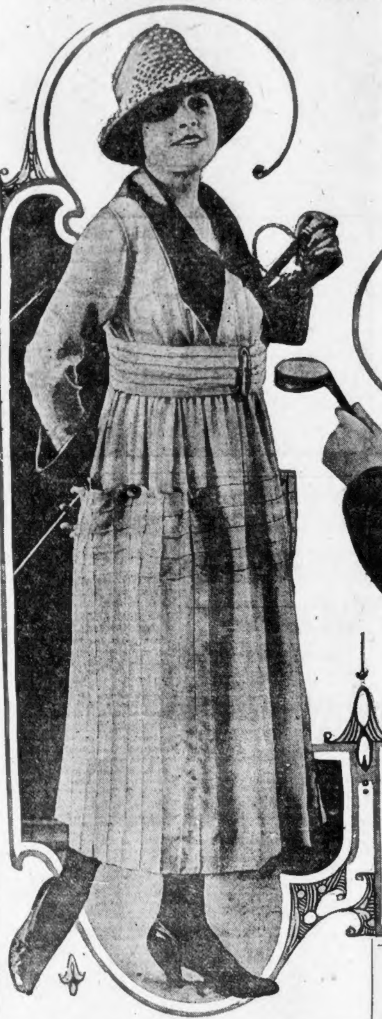
SPECIAL NOTICE.

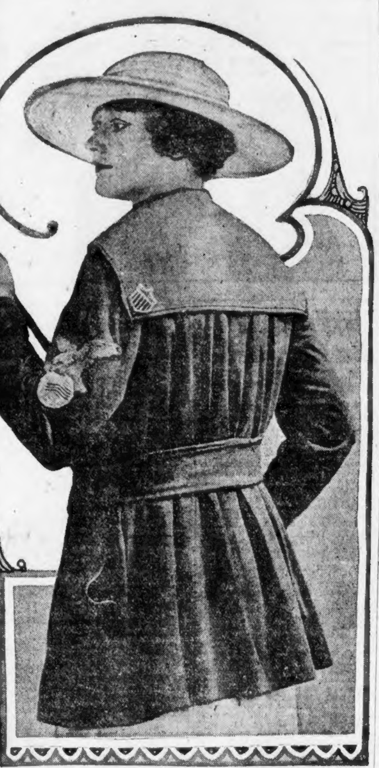
No More Rough, Red, Chapped Hands

It is an old saying that a woman's hands tell her age and social standing better than her face. There is no excuse for any woman to have rough, red, chapped hands, no matter how much housework she may do. A specialist has perfected a preparation that keeps the hands wonderfully soft and youthfully white. It is called La-may (French, Creme L'Ame). You get enough for weeks for only a few cents from any of the big stores. All you do is to apply it after you wash your hands or before you go outdoors. You will be delighted to see the quick improvement in your hands. It is also wonderful for the complexion, for rough skin, wrinkles, crow's feet and enlarged pores. Better than cold cream, because it cannot grow hair; guaranteed not to contain glycerine, which dries and ages the skin. There is also a delightful La-may Face Powder that is guaranteed absolutely pure and that stays on better than any other face powder. Save this notice.

Sweater Coat and New Spring Frock

HERE'S a unique new Spring frock with rows of tucks stitched in black to match the collar and cuffs of black satin as the chief trimming features. Smoked pearl buttons catch the deep flounce to the skirt foundation, forming simulated pockets. The sweater coat below is of dark wool jersey. Its wide sailor collar and left sleeve are appropriately embroidered with patriotic emblems in national colors.





Puss in Boots Jr.

By David Cory

NOW, as I was saying in the last story, Mr. Hercules, his pockets bulging with the golden apples, and little Puss Junior climbed down the big high mountain on the top of which Mr. Atlas held up the blue heavens on his shoulders, you remember, and when they reached the valley a poor shepherd met them told them that a ferocious lion was roaming about and eating all the lambs and goats.

So Mr. Hercules said to Puss, "Here is an adventure for you and me," and he sharpened the points on his great club and counted the arrows in his quiver, and then, all of a sudden, they heard a tremendous roar, and in less time than I can take to tell you that ferocious lion came in sight.

But, oh, dear me! the arrows of Mr. Hercules never even pierced that lion's tawny skin, and all of a sudden he sprang at Mr. Hercules. And, oh, dear me again! the club of Mr. Hercules bounced off that tawny hide like a rubber rope; and I guess it soon would have been all over with Mr. Hercules if he hadn't grasped that lion around the throat and strangled him then and there!

And this need not seem strange to you, for let me tell you Mr. Hercules was the strongest man of his day. Why, when he was only a little baby in his cradle he squeezed to death two snakes who tried to kill him. And I could tell you lots more about him if I had the space, but I must get on with my story, for I know you are anxious to hear what happened next.

"Now, my little friend," said Mr. Hercules, after he had skinned the lion, "come with me, for I must give this skin to a man who had commanded me to do twelve acts of strength."

So off they start, and when the man saw Hercules coming toward him with the lion's skin over his shoulders he was so frightened that he told him to stay outside the town and not come in.

Well, after that Mr. Hercules and little Puss Junior went upon their way, and by and by they came to a country called Argos, and there they heard about a monster with nine heads called Hydra.

And when the dreadful monster saw Mr. Hercules it rushed at him, its nine mouths wide open, an awful sight. But Mr. Hercules raised his club and knocked off one of its heads, but instantly two more grew in its place. Wasn't that terrible? "What shall I do?" asked Mr. Hercules, and the Puss touched that dreadful monster with his flaming feather, and its nine heads and the extra one, too, burnt up like pieces of paper, all except one, I meant to say, and that one Mr. Hercules buried under a huge rock. And that was the end of the dreadful monster.

So Mr. Hercules and Puss set off together in search of further adventure and in the next story you shall hear what happened after—that is, if Mrs. Hercules doesn't telephone her husband to come home before I can write the story.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Domineering

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am engaged to a girl a year my junior, whom I love dearly, but she has a habit of scolding over the merest trifle, and always wishes her advice to be taken in all things. When I can, I do, but of course her advice isn't suitable for all purposes, as I try to point out to her, but of no avail. She may get angry and not talk to me all week (I call three times a week) or until I give in to her point.

If we have no particular engagement on hand for Sunday, I call about 4 p. m., no later, but she gets angry and won't go anywhere, saying the day is gone for any amusement.

Now, Miss Fairfax, can you tell me what to do to get her out of that domineering habit?

A. B. C.

THE domineering woman is likely to be a vixenish, shrewish wife, and unless the man who loves her teaches her to conquer her habits, it is likely to net her and him as well a great deal of misery. I think what is required of you is firmness and common sense plus determination. Perhaps the uncertainty as to what time you are coming gets on the girl's nerves. Have enough respect for her to make your appointments and to keep them.

Narrow-Minded

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am engaged to a soldier who is now in France. Our engagement has not been announced, owing to the war. I have several other friends who are in the service on this side and who take me out quite a little and who know of my engagement. My fiance's family disapproves of my accepting any attentions from anybody and have made it uncomfortable for me. They have also written to him, exaggerating greatly. As I love my soldier dearly I hate to have them make him think otherwise. Should I give up receiving all the attentions of my friends, some of them also friends of his? I would appreciate very much some advice about the matter.

HELEN.

SINCE the men with whom you are going about know of your engagement I fancy they take you out for purely friendly reasons and that their respect for you, as well as your own dignity, keep you from doing one single thing that would belittle your own real love. Of course your fiance's family have an intense loyalty for their boy and hate to have you do anything that would seem in any way to belittle him or our love for him. Perhaps if you would go to them and explain your position, that would set their minds at rest. I grant you that they are narrow-minded. There is no real necessity for you to sit at home doing nothing because your sweetheart is on the other side.

The Gentle Viper

A species of viper (Viper macropa) from Bosnia, about eighteen inches in length, seems to feed exclusively on grasshopers. An interesting point about this little snake is that, although poisonous, it may be handled with impunity. If teased, it may hiss and snap, but never bites, unless seriously hurt.

Another viper, which feeds on lizards and mice, has a like reputation for a gentle disposition. This is common in the neighborhood of Laxenburg, where the village boys may be seen playing with it.

A SERIAL OF YOUTH AND ROMANCE

Cynthia Vetoes a Suggestion That She and Dora Stay at the Van Sauns for Dinner

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company.

STEPHEN LIVINGSTONE had spoken truly when he said that Dora usually had her own way. The present occasion was no exception to the rule, for Cynthia raised only a feeble objection to her cousin's remarkable proposal.

"Don't you think," she ventured, "that Milton will want you to take him in your car?"

"I don't care if he does!" Dora declared defiantly, though still merrily. "Coming here with a taxi for you was his own idea. Let him carry it out. And since he asked to be allowed to be your escort to our house I have a right to ask Gerald to be mine."

The whole idea seemed ridiculous to Cynthia. Here was Dora, with a big limousine, permitting her betrothed to take her cousin home, while she—Dora—drove home in her own car with Gerald Stewart. It was a self-willed girl's idea of a frolic, and with this thought Cynthia had to be content. Moreover, down in the bottom of her heart, she was aware that she was not averse to having five minutes alone with Milton Van Saun.

Edward Van Saun may have had his own views of the situation, but he only smiled amusedly.

"Young people will be young people!" he observed. "So I will let you children arrange matters to suit yourselves."

A few minutes later Milton Van Saun and Gerald Stewart appeared.

"Well, I'll be blessed! Here are two of you!" Milton exclaimed. "Dora when I saw your car outside I jumped to the conclusion that it had been sent around for Cynthia. I had no idea you had come for her yourself."

"Well, I did come for her, but I understand that you forestalled me," his fiancee teased. There was not a trace of jealousy or resentment in her tone or manner, a fact which Edward Van Saun noted. "And since you wanted to take her home in a bumpy taxi," Dora continued, "you may do it. Gerald is going to drive around with me in my car, although he did not know it until now. Then you can return together."

Cynthia Objects

"I say!" (Milton was struck by a happy inspiration.) "Why don't you girls stay here to dinner with Dad and us? It would be larks."

"Oh, that would be larks! Let's telephone mother."

"I would be delighted," Edward Van Saun began. But this was one of the times when Cynthia asserted herself.

"Thank you, very much," she said. "But really we cannot stay."

"Oh, Cyn!" Dora pouted. "Don't be a spoil-sport! It would be such fun to stay. Caspar could take the car home and the boys can take us over after dinner."

"I am sure Aunt Amanda would not be pleased," Cynthia insisted.

Milton Van Saun's blue eyes were fastened on hers imploringly, but when he saw her expression of determination he protested no further.

"Well, I suppose what Cynthia says goes," Dora remarked, with as good grace as she could muster.

The Livingstones' chauffeur looked somewhat mystified as he held the door open for his young mistress and Gerald Stewart, while the man to whom his young mistress was engaged went in a plebeian taxi with her cousin. To Cynthia, clear-eyed and honest, the situation was as unusual as it was to the chauffeur. But her sense of humor came to her relief and she laughed as Milton drew the rug about her.

"Isn't Dora the most deliciously original child in the world?" she said. "She is using two cars and three men to take us five blocks."

"She's nothing if not original," Milton acquiesced. "That is one of her charms. I find it especially delightful just now, as it allows me to carry out the program I had planned and escort you home myself."

"It was very kind of you, but quite unnecessary," Cynthia rejoined.

She must keep the conversation in safe channels. "Dora brought the car by for me, you know," she went on. "She had been shopping all the afternoon, getting her trousseau. She is very sensible to begin upon it long enough ahead not to be tired out when the wedding day comes. What a lovely bride she will make!"

An Irrelevant Remark

Inwardly she was slightly frightened when she found how difficult it was to make this speech. Why should she shrink from talking to this man of Dora's marriage to him?

But Milton Van Saun made no answer. Instead, he looked at her searchingly.

"Cynthia, I wonder if my friendship will ever begin to mean to you what your friendship means to me," he said, irrelevantly.

"You hardly know yet what my friendship might mean," she parried, smilingly. "You see, you scarcely know me."

"I knew you the first moment I saw you!" he informed her, with sudden indiscretion.

"You mean you had heard Dora speak of me," she corrected.

"I do not!" he contradicted. "I mean that I saw you in Chicago, and watched you, and even spoke to you."

"You spoke to me in Chicago?" she echoed, mystified.

"Yes—I stepped right in front of you, and you dropped your letter and I picked it up and handed it to you, and you thanked me."

He stopped, startled at his own temerity. A look of recollection was creeping over Cynthia's face.

"Oh!" she murmured, "then you are the man who——"

The car gave a sudden lurch, there was the sound of splintering wood and Cynthia was thrown violently against Milton Van Saun's shoulder. Then, for a moment she knew nothing.

Gas from Wood

Experiments on wood as part substitute for coal in gas-making have recently been carried out in France. The wood used was sea pine in the form of billets cut from the middle of the trunk. The charge of the wood was about half the weight of that of coal, and carbonization occupied about half the usual time. When running one retort with wood to every two with coal, no appreciable difference in the calorific power of the gas was noted. Of the two by-products—small coke and tar—the former amounted to five to ten per cent.

NEW ORCHESTRA TO ENLIVEN PIER BOYS

Leader Grossman to Make Debut at Golden Rule Club Show

By PAUL WHELTON.

Aboard the Receiving Ship Commonwealth Pier, March 4.—Still another new orchestra is in process of formation aboard the "Motionless" at Commonwealth Pier where musical assemblies are put together for a few weeks. Many members are "drafted" into active service, making new bands and orchestras necessary if the bluejackets are to have music without which, they say, they would be practically unable to eat or work.

There will be fifteen pieces in the new orchestra which will perform under the leadership of "Mickey" Grossman, who wields a syncopated and rhythmic baton. Four violins, three cornets, three trombones, two clarinets, one melophone, one drum and traps and one piano will be included in the orchestra, according to Leader Grossman.

The newest musical group will make their formal debut at the show to be given next Wednesday night by the Golden Rule Club girls in "Seaside Theatre." A few members of Grossman's party offered their services at the show given recently by the Filene girls' club, and, although they had but one rehearsal and a number of the pieces were in manuscript form, they fitted into the parts as though they had been rehearsing for weeks.

Leader Grossman has been prominent in musical affairs aboard ship since he was assigned to the "Immobile." A week ago he collected a few musical members of his "crew" and, after one rehearsal in the afternoon aboard ship, entertained in the evening, as a Jazz band a college society dining at a prominent Boston hotel.

'BOSTON'S OWN' POSTOFFICE SHOWPLACE

Camp Devens Station Has Equipment Equal to City of 10,000

By William Flynn.

Camp Devens, Ayer, March 4.—The 301st Infantry, "Boston's Own," Regiment boasts of one of the finest branch postoffices anywhere in New England. It is one of the show places of the cantonment and the boys of the regiment take a particular delight in taking their relatives and friends who visit them in camp to "the place where they get their mail."

The regimental postoffice is in charge of Sergeant William E. Corrigan of East Boston, who was employed in the main postoffice in Boston before he was drafted into the army. His assistants are Corporals H. W. Donahue of Brookline, who formerly worked for a well-known refining company; W. J. Kean, of South Boston, another former postoffice employe, and J. J. Barry of Dorchester, who once pushed a pen for a Boston trust company.

The office has an equipment equal to the postoffice of any community of 10,000 in the State and the furnishing, even to the electric lights, were purchased by the men in the office out of their special delivery fees.

Each unit in the regiment has its own mail bag, and the mail is delivered twice a day. There are private racks for the officers and a special box for all outgoing official mail.

An average of 569 packages and forty sacks of mail passes through this postoffice every day, and Lieutenant John Keough, camp postmaster, is as proud of the branch as the boys are themselves.

The newly arrived draftees in the Depot Brigade return to their drilling after a day of rest during which a host of their relatives and friends visited them at their barracks. Four thousand of the new men and others in the Depot Brigade attended two special masses that were given for their benefit at the K. of C. auditorium.

The Rev. Thomas B. McGinn, post chaplain, delivered a sermon at both masses. Two thousand men were lined up outside the auditorium in company formation while the other 2,000 were attending the first mass. Protestant services were held in the barracks.

Owing to the large crowd that visited the camp semaphore signals of stop and go were used by the military police assigned to traffic duty. This was the first time these signals had ever been used in the cantonment, but the experiment is said to have been a success and they will become a regular fixture with the traffic squad.

COWBOY AT DEVENS

Quartermaster Sergeant R. Harrington, formerly a Buenos Ayres cowboy, now at Camp Devens' Remount Station.

Quartermaster-Sergeant R. Harrington, now at the Remount Station at Camp Devens with the "Liberty Boys," was formerly a cowboy on his own ranch in Buenos Ayres, where he acquired valuable knowledge about horses. He is one of the valuable men at the camp by reason of this knowledge.

Sergeant Harrington, who claims Springfield, Mass., as his home, enlisted in October, last, and when his superior officers learned of his special training he was sent to Ayer.

In the romantic garb of a South American cowboy he roamed the hills of his ranch, but when this country declared war yielded to the call of his country and came here to help convince the Kaiser that he has bitten off more than he can chew.

EDITORIAL

If you have a boy in camp or if you know a boy in camp, visit him as often as possible. If you cannot visit him, write to him as often as possible. The face of someone who is dear to him is a welcome sight to any chap in the army, particularly when he is in camp and cannot get home.

A bright, cheery letter will also go a long ways toward helping a young fellow keep up his courage through the inevitable weeks of necessary training in our National Army. Make him feel he is not forgotten. Make him realize the folks he left at home are thinking of him constantly and appreciate the fact he is fighting their battle. It will help immeasurably.

The people of New England are fortunate in having Camp Devens so accessible. Many of them are to be complimented for the interest they take in the boys in camp, but there are many thousands of shirkers who ought to do their bit and there is no time like the present. Wake up!

"Cupid" Lee, whose parents originally called him Joe, is known to his commissary schoolmates at the pier, as a perfidious heartbreaker. A certain young lady from an office on the main deck can always count on "Cupid's" attention whenever she has occasion to visit the school. Joe culls his health from the salt winds and waters of Revere.

Among the Boys at Camp Devens

Colonel J. S. Herron, commanding the 304th Infantry Regiment, has had the field and staff officers of his outfit playing a technical war game. Practically every known open battle problem has been touched upon and the officers have acquired much useful military information. Maps have been used to represent battlefields, and arranged on opposite sides the officers manoeuvred for strategic positions with their "commands."

* * *

The boys in B Company, 301st Ammunition Train, have received a batch of photographs of film stars and scenes from leading photoplays with which to decorate their barracks. Many of the stars are favorites with the outfit and the boys are much pleased.

AYER STUDENTS TO PARADE HERE

Graduating Officers to Take Part in Event on Patriots' Day

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, March 4.—Arrangements are under way to have the graduates of the third officers' training school parade in Boston on Patriots' Day. This is the day upon which the enlisted personnel and college men attending the school here in camp are expected to graduate, and the parade, if it takes place, will be listed as part of the graduating exercises.

There are 665 candidates in the school at present. The school started with 715 candidates, but fifty of them were dropped for various reasons. The candidates started the ninth week of their course today.

The instructors at the school have profited by the mistakes made by the two previous officers' training schools, and it is predicted that the men turned out of the third school will rank with the best trained soldiers in the country.

The college men who came here to attend the school have learned what it is to be in the army and any erroneous ideas they may have entertained concerning their superiority has been thoroughly drilled out of them. The enlisted men at the school represent the cream of the 76th Division, with months of intensive training to their credit. They set a fast pace at the outset and the college men have had to keep up with them.

If the graduates of this school parade in Boston the spectators will see one of the best trained organizations that ever visited the city. The parade will be headed by Lieutenant-Colonel M. N. Falles, and the battalions by Majors Ralph Lowell and Oliver J. Schoonmaker.

Captain A. M. Owen of the bakery company has assigned several of his most experienced men to duty at the training school. Among these men is Quartermaster-Sergeant Christopher J. Dunphy, formerly assistant manager of a Boston hotel and manager of the Mount Pleasant Hotel, at Bretton Woods, N. H. Sergeant Dunphy, who is one of the most able men in the division in his line, is soon to receive a commission in the Quartermaster Corps.

The examination boards of the various regimental schools have been appointed. Each board consists of three majors, who will make up the examinations for each of the schools this week.

Ysaye Draws Big Crowd at Last Concert

Ysaye, master violinist, made his final Boston appearance of the season in Symphony Hall Sunday afternoon. A large number of music lovers flocked to the hall and enthusiastically applauded his varied and liberal program.

The selections ranged from "Berceuse" and a "Divertimento" of his own, through Saint-Saens' "Havanaise," Beethoven's Sonata in G major, and Wieniawski's concerto in D minor, to the Finale of Vieuxtemps' concerto in E major.

In response to repeated recalls he added a number of pieces, all of which gave great satisfaction.

The program afforded ample range for Ysaye's artistry, and he appeared in gracious mood and performed at his best.

Mr. Rubenstein, the assisting pianist, added to the pleasure of Ysaye's playing, and Miss Martha van Dresser gave variety to the concert by a number of songs. Her voice is a pleasing soprano. She sang with skill and feeling, giving a folk-song, an old Italian air, French numbers by Duparc and Faure, and ancient pieces by Haydn and Emanuel Bach.

SCHOOL TEACHER DIES FROM GAS POISONING

Raymond Coleman, formerly a teacher in the New Bedford High School, who several days ago was found overcome by gas in a room on Hancock street, Somerville, died today in the Somerville Hospital. He did not regain consciousness. After leaving New Bedford High School Coleman was attached to the paymaster's office of the Navy Department in Washington. When he hired the room in Somerville he told the landlady that he wanted it only for a couple of days. Previous to that time he had been living with a sister in Cambridge.

The Japanese Way To Remove Corns Doesn't Hurt a Bit—Easy and Simple

The Magic Touch of Ice-Mint Does It. Just a Touch Stops Soreness, Then the Corn or Callous Shrivels and Lifts Off. Try It. Your Feet Will Feel Cool and Fine.

Just a touch of Ice-mint and "Oh!" what relief. Corns and callouses vanish, soreness disappears and you can dance all night or walk all day and your corns won't hurt a bit. No matter what you have tried or how many times you have been disappointed here is a real help for you at last. From the very second that Ice-mint touches that sore, tender corn your poor tired, aching feet will feel so cool, easy and comfortable that you will just sigh with relief. Think of it; just a little touch of that delightful, cooling Ice-mint and real foot joy is yours. No matter how old or tough your pet corn is he will shrivel right up and you can pick him out after a touch of Ice-mint. No pain, not a bit of soreness, either when applying it or afterwards, and it doesn't even irritate the skin.

Ice-mint is the real Japanese secret of fine healthy, little feet. Prevents foot odors and keeps them cool, sweet and comfortable. It is now selling like wildfire here.

Just ask in any drug store for a little Ice-mint and give your poor suffering, tired feet the treat of their lives. There is nothing better, nor nothing "just as good."—Advertisement.

INVITE PUPILS TO DESIGN POSTERS

Plan to Assist Campaign for Securing $2,000,000 War Funds

Every school pupil in Massachusetts, as one of those in the United States, has the opportunity to join in the National War Savings Poster contest, to design a poster to promote the $2,000,000,000 campaign for war funds.

A total of $200 in prizes in War Savings Stamps is offered for the posters adjudged the best for the purpose. First prize in Class A is twelve War Savings Certificates, $60; in Class B, eight certificates, $40; Class C, four certificates, $20; with second and third prizes in each class proportionately. In addition, a national prize of honor, a ribbon, goes to an individual in each class.

The competition begins this first week in March and posters may be submitted up to May 15.

The subject or themes of the posters should be based upon the following:

1—Manufacture and labor as necessities of the army and navy, such as cannon, machine guns and motorcycles.

2—Thrift as substitutes for meat, sugar, and other war necessities and the uses of the printing press, the electric light, etc., releasing other fuel using devices for war purposes.

3—War Saving Societies: 20,000,000 school children for savings, saving twenty-five cents a week would feed an American army of 1,000,000 men.

The following should be included in the poster design:

(a) An original design portraying the message of war savings.

(b) A slogan appropriate to the campaign.

(c) The words War Savings, War Savings Stamps, War Savings Certificates, War Savings Society; or the letters W. S. S.

(d) The date 1918.

(e) Space for the identifying imprint with its Liberty-Emblem in the corner. This may be any size.

Each poster must be numbered and the number also placed in an envelope sealed with name and residence of designer.

Competitors may enter only one class and not more than two designs may be submitted by a single individual.

All posters must be sent to the Massachusetts Normal Art School, Exeter and Newbury streets, Boston, Mass., on or before May 15.

Keep Looking Young

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by every one, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.—Advertisement.

ARCHBISHOP TO HELP HUB, SAYS LAWRENCE

English Prelate Coming Here March 12; a Man's Man, He Asserts

Bishop Lawrence has written an appreciation of Cosmo Gordon Lang, archbishop of York, who is now in this country and who will visit Boston, March 12, to speak in Faneuil Hall.

The bishop says that the ancient differences between England and America have been settled through their union "for the common cause of liberty, humanity and justice." The Archbishop's visit, he says, will bring the American and English people into still closer sympathy and understanding.

"The Archbishop will help us," he writes. "He is a man of today—a man's man. Like many distinguished Englishmen, he is, as is also the Archbishop of Canterbury, a Scotsman.

"Like most leaders in the English church, he has had experience in three lines of service. He has lived in the heart of the intellectual life of Great Britain. He has put years into strenuous service in the hardest districts of England.

"Besides these two interests, he has been active in civic interests and has shown himself to have abilities as a statesman.

"He has expressly said that he comes not so much as an ecclesiastic as a citizen of Great Britain.

"What would Peter Faneuil have thought of an archbishop in his hall, and how the Puritans would have writhed at the suggestion! These differences are now lost in the great drive for liberty."

Trinity's Doors Opened Second Time to Church of England Archbishop

By International News Service.

New York, March 4.—For the second time since it received its charter from the British crown in the seventeenth century, Old Trinity Church, in lower Broadway, has opened its doors to a metropolitan of the Church of England.

His Grace Cosmo Gordon Lang, Lord Archbishop of York, here on a mission to strengthen the bonds between England and America, preached a war sermon from the historic pulpit.

So great was the crowd which filled the church that the entrance procession down the centre of the church was abandoned. Hundreds of people crowded outside the main and side entrances unable to gain admission. Several women fainted in the crush.

As the archbishop and procession entered at a side door, the old chimes rang out their welcome with the national anthems of the two nations. Rev. William T. Manning, D. D., rector of Trinity, followed with dignitaries.

In the sanctuary a dais was erected on which was placed the chair and prayer book used by the archbishop of Canterbury when he visited Trinity Church in 1904.

Archbishop Lang pleaded for closer ties of friendship between "the two greatest English speaking people" and said that all the material and spiritual forces of America were needed by the allies to win the war. He paid tribute to the idealism of the people of the United States and their historic and contemporary leaders.

"There are two questions which this generation must settle," he said. "The one is whether there is to be in the world a light of freedom for all. The other is whether, out of all the ruins of our civilization, the power of all peoples to be better and stronger during the centuries to come, shall endure. Our power to answer these questions depends mainly upon the strength and courage of the ideal which we set before ourselves.

"Speaking to you as I do from the heart of a host afar off, from the heart of a people which is almost dying because of the suffering and sacrifices it endures, I tell you my nation and the Allies need at this moment every pound of material and moral strength and help that you can send.

"There are three great dreams which my visit to the United States has brought to mind. One is that after this war, and because of this war, a league of nations might be established pledged to secure the future peace of the world. The one passionate desire of the Allies about the war is in these two words, 'Never again.'"

MISS LILLIAN LORAINE, who has deserted vaudeville for the catchy piece, "Odds and Ends."

Lillian Lorraine, who has been a vaudeville favorite for several seasons, returns to Boston next week as the prima donna of "Odds and Ends," the clever and curious musical review put on by Jack Norworth in his own theatre in New York. "Odds and Ends" is full of clever people, bright music, pretty girls and pep.

There is a lot of naval stuff in "Odds and Ends," and lots of people have asked where Norworth got his knowledge of the sea. The answer is that Jack was a sailor himself. As a young man he shipped on the old training ship "Saratoga." After two seasons he went as a quartermaster with the Cunard Line and then joined the American line service, travelling on the steamers New York, St. Paul, St. Louis, and Paris, between Plymouth, Eng., and New York for four seasons.

Norworth is the author of more popular songs than any actor except George Cohan. He wrote "Teasing," "Holding Hands," "Smarty" and "Take Me out to the Ball Game."

BIG THRONG ATTENDS CLOSING DAY OF MISSION

Thousands of people attended the closing of one of the most successful missions ever given at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. At the request of one of the mission fathers made during the week that the men attend the 7 o'clock mass and receiv holy communion in a body, nearly 2,000 men were present at that mass and received.

Hundreds of men also received holy communion at the 6 and 8 o'clock masses. There was a solemn high mass at 10 o'clock, with the Rev. Augustine F. Hickey, supervisor of parochial schools as the celebrant. Nearly 3,000 people attended the 11:30 o'clock mass. The Rev. J. A. Mackin, C. P., preached the sermons at all the masses.

It was announced that Devotion of the Forty Hours will opeen in the Cathedral with a solemn high mass at 9 a. m. on Friday next, March 8. The devotion will be brought to a close with benediction and solemn procession of the Blessed Sacrament at the conclusion of the solemn high mass at 10 a. m. on Sunday, March 10. On Saturday morning, March 9, at eight o'clock, there will be a solemn high mass at St. Joseph's altar. This mass is known as "Missa Pro Pace," meaning "Mass for PePace," and is celebrated always on the second morning of the Devotion of the Forty Hours.

MARCH 4, 1918. BOSTON.

Get Behind the Absolute Public Control Recommended by the Public Service Commission

Everybody knows that the service on the Boston Elevated Railway has reached a condition which can be borne no longer. Cattle and swine being transported to the slaughter house are better served than the patrons of the Boston Elevated Street Railway.

The AMERICAN is not undertaking to place or to apportion the blame. The situation concerning the Boston Elevated is very peculiar It has had to bear an unusual burden not borne by other street railways in this State. But this does not alter the truth that the conditions of the Boston Elevated service are intolerable They are court-martialing a major in the Medical Corps in France today for keeping an unhygienic hospital. If a major in the Medical Corps were responsible for conditions permitted in our cars during the rush hours, it is doubtful if anybody would wait for court-martial.

What is the remedy? The railroads, under private management, broke down and failed utterly to perform the service required of them. They went to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which is to the nation what our Public Service Commission is to the State, and asked for the right to increase the fares, claiming that if they got more money they could render better service. The Interstate Commerce Commission refused to give them any more money, the government took control of them and has been operating them ever since, and the money which they receive today will be spent by the government in the ways, and at the times, and for the ends, which the government prescribes

Now, our Public Service Commission has been studying the transportation problem in Boston for a long time. They have made two elaborate special investigations. They have called in outside experts to study the problem, bringing to it the experience of the country at large. As a result of all this study, the Public Service Commission, the body which the State has established as its representatives and experts on street railway matters, recommends that the public take absolute and exclusive control of the Boston Elevated Railway through a Board of Directors, called Trustees, to be appointed by the Governor and the Mayor; that the public guarantee a 5% dividend upon the stock of the Elevated until the public is ready to purchase the property of the Elevated or, with the consent of the Elevated stockholders, to turn the control back to the company. This last will never occur, because, even though we have been very slow in this country to make progress in the last few years, we do not go backwards when we have made a step ahead.

Do the citizens want to solve the street railway problem permanently and definitely? Do they want to solve it in the way other progressive communities are solving their problems by public control and operation?

It cannot be doubted that a great majority of the citizens of the Metropolitan District approve most heartily of the recommendation of the Public Service Commission. But we must remember that the lobby at the State House will be against it, because the lobby lives at the expense of the privately managed public service corporations, and there is also likely to be a considerable number of legislators who are very fond of the lobby, and for very many reasons would hate to see it disappear in consequence of the public control of our public service corporations. These gentlemen can, of course, be depended upon to do everything possible to prevent the enactment of the Public Service Commission's proposal into law, and thus to prevent Boston from getting the progressive and permanent relief which we need so much.

But, if the citizens of the Metropolitan district get behind this recommendation of the Public Service Commisson, nothing can stop it.

Plenty of Rifles for Army, Says Secretary Keppel

Dr. Frederick P. Keppel, the able and courteous secretary to Newton D. Baker, the head of the War Department, told an audience at the Boston City Club Thursday night some things that the people of this community, especially those who are reading the Republican and copperhead newspapers, ought to know about what their government is doing in the war work.

Among other things Mr. Keppel told us:

> The War Department today has rifles enough for an army of 3,200,000 men, and every two days there are being turned out enough more to supply two divisions.

Now the point in the War Department's position that its opponents have considered most vulnerable and at which they have directed their fiercest attacks was the handling of this rifle situation. Our army was pictured by these pestiferous partisans, more anxious to gain political advantage than to win the war, as about to be thrown against the splendidly equipped enemy armed only with clubs and pitchforks and abandoned old-fashioned rifles. Of course, there is some excuse for the Republican party when it assumes that this is likely to happen, for this is just about what did happen in the Spanish War, conducted by the Republican party, when our soldiers, armed with old-fashioned, black powder, short range Civil War rifles, the curling smoke from which at every shot revealed the whereabouts of the men, were sent against the Spanish troops armed with the latest model, high power, long range, smokeless German Mauser rifles

The War Department was criticised by these Republicans from their glasshouse because the War Department took a little time to perfect our rifle. The event justifies the time that was taken, for now our troops are armed with the best and latest type of rifle and there are enough rifles of that pattern to supply more than three million men, or six times as many as we have trained, and many more rifles are being manufactured than can be used by the number of men we are likely to have in the field for a long time.

Mr. Keppel pointed out the magnitude of the War Department's task in these words:

> When it is realized that the government is spending every ninety days three times as much as it did in any one year on the Panama Canal, the stupendous task before us may be appreciated.
> More men are already enlisted than the combined armies of '61 and of the Spanish-American War.
> When Sherman marched to the sea through Georgia he took sixty cannon with 200 rounds of ammunition for each. Today a well-behaved gun will shoot 200 rounds in ten minutes.

It is especially pleasing to note Mr. Keppel's observation concerning the dollar-a-year men. The AMERICAN has long believed that they were a pest and nuisance in Washington and that most of them were there vociferating their love of country where thrift might follow patriotism. Said Mr. Keppel on this subject:

> Then came a period of doubt when we began to wonder whether some of the dollar men were worth their salaries. There came confusion, and weakness began to creep in because of favoritism. It was a period when many "over-night majors," as they are termed, appeared, and general pessimism was prevalent. We are an impatient people, and work was not progressing fast enough.

Mr. Keppel may be right that the contractors have averaged on these cost-plus contracts only three per cent. We know that he would not consciously misstate the facts and we have noted that Mr. Baker himself has asserted that the percentage of profit was less than three per cent. But we seriously doubt whether Mr. Baker and Dr. Keppel have been given the correct figures. These cost-plus contracts are bad contracts and no amount of excusing will justify them. We believe that Secretary Baker and the War Department have come to realize it. Undoubtedly they were the kind of contracts which any Secretary of War would have approved when first confronted with the problem which confronted Secretary Baker, but now things are assuming order and he is having time to profit by his experience, we believe that these cost-plus contracts will give way to another and better method of doing the necessary work.

Her Smileage Book

AMERICA

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

I AM the refuge of all the oppressed
I am the boast of the free;
I am the harbor where ships may rest
Safely 'twixt sea and sea.
I lighten the path with its ray.
Let my hand keep steady
And let me be ready
For whatever comes my way—
Let me be ready

Oh, better than fortresses, better than guns
Better than lance or spear,
Are the loyal hearts of my daughters and sons,
Faithful and without fear.
But my daughters and sons must understand
That ATTILA did not die.
And they must be ready,
Their hands must be steady;
If the hosts of hell come nigh—
They must be ready!

If Jesus were back on the earth with men
He would not preach today
Until He had made Him a scourge, and again
He would drive the defilers away.
He would throw down the tables of lust and greed
And scatter the Changers' gold.
He would be ready,
His hand would be steady.
As it was in that Temple of old.
He would be ready!

I am the cradle of God's new world,
From me shall the new race rise,
And my glorious banner must float unfurled,
Unsullied against the skies
My sons and daughters must be my strength,
With courage to do and to dare;
With hearts that are ready,
With hands that are steady,
And their slogan must be PREPARE.
They must be ready!

With prayer on the lip they must shoulder arms
For, after all has been said,
We must muster guns
If we master Huns,
And ATTILA is not dead

EMPLOYERS' ATTITUDE ON SALARY RAISES

By Elizabeth Jordan

DEAR MISS JORDAN
I've been working in one place for three years. My employer seems satisfied with me, but he has never raised my salary. My friends think I am silly not to ask for more money. I think my employer will raise my salary without being asked to do so. What do you think? VIRGINIA.

WHAT I think, Virginia, is that you are an optimist. I congratulate you on being one. I welcome you to the decreasing band of optimists in the world today, I myself being a charter member of that band.

Then, Virginia, I take you lovingly by the hand. I draw you off into a quiet corner where none may hear us talk. There, in low and earnest tones, I tell you a few things you need to know about the business world.

The first is this:

Business Policy

Even the most just and generous men are slow to voluntarily raise the salaries of their employes. The obvious explanation of the fact is their natural desire to keep down "running expenses" and make a good showing on their books

If the payroll is under the direction of a general manager he often regards an increase in it as a reflection on his administration. If the proprietor himself adjusts the salaries he is generally determined to keep them within the limit he has fixed for that purpose. The task is not an easy one. It means "sitting on the lid," and sitting on it very firmly.

For you see, Virginia, you are not alone in your desire for a higher salary. The girl at the desk beside yours has it, too. The young fellows in the bookkeeping department are thinking about it pretty constantly.

It is a safe assumption that practically every employe of the big concern is either looking hopefully for a raise or cherishing a grouch because he hasn't had one.

There, Virginia, you have your second explanation of the inertia of the "boss" as to raising salaries. If he did it in one case he would have to do it in many others. A year later he would be called upon to do it again. His salary list would be increasing year by year.

Income Counts

If the receipts of the business are growing, too, the salary increase is legitimate, and is usually philosophically accepted. If the receipts remain stationary, or fall off, the employer is naturally coy about increasing his running expenses.

Looking around you, Virginia, you see these different types of workers in your office. You distinguish the pace-makers, the hustlers, the steadies, the indifferent, the slackers, one from another.

DISSIPATION OF SEEING RED IN THE FORTIES

By Winfred Black

"OH," [illegible] the Middle-aged Woman, rolling her large, dark eyes, and giving us all a sweet, tantalizing, secret Mona Lisa smile, "Oh, I just would be bored to death without men—and love affairs.

"I always keep one or two on hand, don't you know?—like the little bon-bon boxes full of chocolates, or the decanter with the sherry in it, or a gold box of cigarettes.

"Life would get on my nerves awfully if I starved my emotions.

"I do hate to be bored, and there's just one way to keep from being bored, and that is to be in love, or to have some one in love with you.

"I think I'm getting elderly. I don't seem to care much for men of my own age. Boys interest me tremendously, and that's always a sign, you know.

"I suppose I ought to be more careful. Harry is drinking himself to death, they say, and Joe has enlisted, and Jimmy has gone to sea. Their people are awfully cut up about it.

"Bobby is here yet. He says he'll kill me first and then himself —if I don't consent to marry him.

"Marriage? No, thank you.

"So far as I can see, marriage puts your emotions in cold storage."

Then the Middle-aged Woman lit another cigarette, and leaned her elbows on the table and did her earnest best to look like a vampire.

Is This Friendship?

We all smiled and said, "Oh, of course," and "Aren't you dreadful?" and "You're really too bad." And we stepped on each other's toes under the table, and avoided each other's eyes, for we knew, all the time, that the Middle-aged Woman was very lonely and very discontented and most unhappy, and none of us had ever seen her with any kind of a man of any age whatsoever, at any time.

But I wonder if we did right—wasn't there one among us, a single honest, friendly, sincere one, who ought to have made it her business to say:

"Now, Mary, don't do the vampire act with us. We all know you're as good as gold and as harmless as a home-made rice pudding; and as for the love affairs, your time's gone by for them long ago."

Wouldn't it have been kinder and more honest to do this than it was to agree with her, and then imitate her and make fun of her afterward?

Governor's Plan for Increased Fares Meets With Hostile Reception at State House

President Edward F. McGrady of the Boston Central Labor Union, speaking for the 82,000 organized working men and women of Greater Boston, today declared unequivocally for immediate public ownership of the Boston Elevated Street Railway.

In the event that absolute ownership is not consummated at this session of the Legislature, President McGrady declared that it is the duty of the State to provide for public control of the Elevated in the manner suggested by the Public Service Commission.

The public control bill of the commission provides for the appointment by the Governor and the Mayor of Boston of a board of trustees of five members to step in and take over control of the Elevated for benefit of the people and the stockholders.

President McGrady's declaration for public ownership or public control was made before the legislative Committee on Street Railways at the first hearing on Governor McCall's recommendation to break the contract by which the Elevated agreed with the

EXEMPTION FOR YOUNG COLT IS CONTESTED

Providence, March 5.—Charging that Roswell C. Colt, twenty-eight years old, son of the multi-millionaire rubber man, is not entitled to exemption, Walter E. Munroe, a special government investigator, will appeal to the district board in this city, it was announced today.

Young Colt, who is the son of Samuel P. Colt and brother-in-law of Ethel Barrymore, was exempted by the local board at Bristol, R. I., on the ground of a dependent child. This child, who is three years old, lives in apartments at Montreal with a nurse, while her father is engaged as a director of a munitions factory at Ottawa.

Colt told the local board that it cost $1,200 a year to support the little girl and received exemption. Complaint was made to Captain George H. Webb, director of the draft in this State, and he appointed Mr. Munroe to investigate.

According to the information given out today Mr. Munroe found that Colt's income, aside from what he earned, was more than double the amount required for the support of the child. As a result the investigator will appeal to the district board asking that the exemption be rescinded.

Shortly after noon Major Casey visited the Causeway street plant and was tendered a reception by the 100 or more employes.

Operators in Exchanges Outside of Boston May Strike Within 48 Hours

Telephone operators in the principal cities of New England outside of Boston will go on strike in 48 hours from noon today unless their demands are complied with.

This is the report of [illegible] committee representing the operators which today delivered an ultimatum at a special conference at the company's offices, No. 50 Oliver street.

The State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration has called a meeting for 10 a. m. tomorrow, in a final effort to adjust the difficulty and avert a strike.

A final conference held today at the company's offices, No. 50 Oliver street, ended without any agreement. The girls, headed by Miss Helena E. Smith of New Bedford, chairman, declined to discuss the situation. Refusal on the part of the girls to arbitrate is believed to have caused a deadlock in the proceedings.

The situation is further [illegible] by an apparent split between [illegible] operators involved and the International organization of Electrical Workers' Unions, with which the telephone operators are affiliated. This is indicated by the fact that George M. Bugniazet, vice-president of the international organization, has not been present at the conferences. It was learned that Mr. Bugniazet arrived in Boston early yesterday, although the conference scheduled for last Friday at the State House before the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration was twice postponed to await Mr. Bugniazet's arrival from the West, he was not present when the conference finally took place yesterday, nor was he at the meeting at company headquarters today.

The Boston AMERICAN will publish tomorrow extracts and facsimiles of illustrations from THE STARS AND STRIPES. This is the first newspaper published by the American soldiers in France.

Japan to Announce Her Policy Toward Siberia in 24 Hours

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, March 5—Japan will let her intentions regarding Siberia become known during the next 24 hours. It is said here that the entente ambassadors in Tokio have asked Japan, on request of their governments, to protect allied interests in all of Siberia.

"That the Mikado's government will agree to do so is considered certain. This move, however, will not be participated in by the United States at present, although officials continue to insist that this government fully recognizes the right of Japan to protect her own and the allied interests.

It is expected that when Japan acts she will do so in that manner that will give the least offense to the Russian people. It is now believed that diplomatic negotiations designed to secure complete unity of action between all of the entente allies, the United States and Japan will be continued.

Because of a treaty [illegible] blowing up the bridges in Siberia and taking steps to wreck the railroad, it is argued by advocates of Japanese intervention that there is no alternative but for Japan to act at once and with a force sufficient to dominate the situation.

GERMANY'S PLAN.

Officials, however, do not look for Germany to attempt in retaliation any aggressive operations against the Japanese in Siberia. This is not believed to be the German plan. It is feared here in Washington that Germany intends to adhere to her plan completely to overrun and control western Russia and to compel Rumania to make peace and secure Ukrainia as an open ally. But even though a military expedition was not sent into Siberia, unless Japan or some other power interfered, all of the valuable supplies stored there, which were intended to be used against Germany will fall into the [illegible] Kaiser's troops.

Administration officials have been urging President Wilson to openly and accurately define the position of the United States. They are pointing out that the necessity for speculating on what may be expected is a very dangerous one and one that is almost certain to lead to very serious misunderstandings.

Secretary of State Lansing is in the South on a very necessary vacation to [illegible] to recover from the after effects of an attack of grip. In his absence there is no one in the department prepared to explain what is going on behind the heavy curtain of censorship which now enshrouds the Far Eastern situation.

Americans Tested by Fire Lauded by Clemenceau

By International News Service.

Paris, March 5.—Premier Clemenceau, who conferred war crosses on six Americans on Sunday, saluted them as follows:

"I congratulate you on your wonderful showing during your baptismal of actual engagement and the way you routed the enemy and smashed his plans.

I was always sure of your fitness as soldiers. Now it is proved to the world—even to the enemy who expects fresh troops unused to warfare to require a long time to accustom themselves to the terrible bombardments of asphyxiating gas and other refinements of modern warfare.

"Instead, the enemy found you resolute and eager to test yourselves against him. I am confident that from the success you have gained, from now on we will be all together in the common aim—the defeat of the Boches."

McGrady for 82,000 Organized Workers Protests Increase of Fares

TUCK ATTACKS GOVERNOR

Governor McCall's proposal was [illegible] McGrady as mere camouflage [illegible] they get the 8-cent fare the Elevated will always retain it under private management, he asserted.

His speech followed a severe arraignment of Governor McCall by Whitfield Tuck of Winchester, a life long friend of the Governor. Mr. Tuck quoted from Governor McCall's speeches in [illegible] against the railroad contr[illegible] said the Governor had participated in the "midnight raid" on [illegible] Elevated during the "mock session" of the last Legislature, pleaded with the committee not to follow "a false leader" and asserted that the Governor "has always been a railroad man."

The hearing was begun by the Street Railways Committee on the Governor's message [illegible] to the protests of Attorney Frederic E. Snow of the Elevated and Chairman Frederic J. Macleod of the Public Service Commission. Chairman Macleod asserted that in the interest of the public, the increase-of-fares proposition should not be considered unless the public control bill was taken up at the same time.

The [illegible] control bill is before the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs. Snow and Macleod recommended that the entire Boston Elevated situation be taken up by a joint committee in order to prevent the endless confusion, but the Street Railways Committee refused to yield and ordered the hearing to continue.

MIGHT ACCEPT COMPROMISE.

Attorney Snow made a brief statement in which he said that the Elevated favors the "service-at-cost" scheme above all other railways that are now before the Legislature. He said that the Elevated would not [illegible] the public control bill [illegible] present shape, but strongly [illegible] that a compromise bill might be acceptable.

President McGrady then spoke. He said, in part:

"I am sent here as the representative of the 82,000 organized working men and women of Boston. We are absolutely opposed to the recommendation of the Governor that [illegible] suspend the contract which the Elevated has with the people. We are opposed to any increase above the five cent fare.

We strongly believe and we urge this committee to report:

"First—in favor of immediate municipal ownership of the Boston Elevated.

"Second—If you reject the first, then to report in favor of public control."

"We regard the Governor's recommendation as a joke, as mere camouflage. He wants to increase the fares for the duration of the war, and one year thereafter. Once the Elevated, under private management, gets the [illegible] fare it will be a long, long [illegible] before it gives it up."

House Chairman Worrall asked President Grady if he was opposed to the zone system.

"We are pledged to municipal ownership or public control," was President McGrady's reply.

"Do you believe the stockholders are entitled to a dividend?"

"Yes, absolutely."

TO SANDBAG THE PUBLIC.

He was asked about the wage increase the Elevated gave to the men during the recent threatened strike.

"In return for giving a 6 per cent increase to some of their employes the Elevated wants to sandbag the public for a 20 per cent. fares increase," he said.

Mr. McGrady asserted that more efficient management can be obtained under public ownership or public control.

"What do you mean by efficient management?" asked a member of the committee.

"You go downtown and take a car at 5 o'clock tonight for Dorchester and you will realize what I mean by efficient management," said President McGrady. "You will be lucky if you get to Dorchester without having your clothes torn off."

Mr. Tuck said he was "thoroughly astounded" when he read the Governor's special message. "'What is the matter with this man? Has he lost his head,' I said to myself when I read it," said Mr. Tuck; "but then I thought of the 'midnight raid' upon the Legislature last year and some of the speeches he made at Washington against public control of the railroads, I realized that he has always been a railroad man.

"He proposes to take the money out of the hundreds of thousands of working men and women who come into this city every day."

Mr. Tuck was asked if he had any [illegible] of the Elevated problem to suggest.

"Yes," he said, "public ownership."

The War in Europe

By ANTHONY ARNOUX,

Famous Writer on Military Topics.

Once more it looks as though Russia had made her final bow and was leaving the stage of the war for good.

But this has so often seemed true before that it will be well to wait to [illegible] her final exit, until there is [illegible] no possible doubt thereof.

The latest report is that a treaty [illegible] has finally been actually signed between the representatives of [illegible] governments and their [illegible] those of the Bolshevik [illegible] Russia.

According to this report the only [illegible] penalty which Russia has [illegible] for her previous hesitation [illegible] regards to Turkey, which is [illegible] from a Turkish standpoint [illegible] restitution than a cession.

Both the towns and regions of the Transcaucasus bearing these names were ceded by Turkey to Russia in 1878, at the end of the Turco-Russian war. Since that time the region of Batoum has grown greatly in importance owing to the development of the very rich oil fields which the country contains.

As Turkey is lacking in developed centres of oil production the possession of these fields will strengthen her both economically and potentially industrially to a considerable degree.

Ardahan is of much less importance, while Kars is a strategic point of value. The whole area ceded is about 7,500 square miles and contains perhaps 350,000 inhabitants.

BOLSHEVIKI TO WITHDRAW.

It may now be assumed that the Bolsheviki will withdraw their forces from the Ukraine and from Finland, as well as the treaty is supposed to contain provisions recognizing the complete independence of Great Russia of these two countries.

If this is done, the eastern front will probably then become completely [illegible] though it will undoubtedly remain necessary for the Teutons to guard the frontiers rather strongly for a considerable time to come.

It will be extremely interesting to see what effect this new treaty will have on Japan's move to take possession of a portion of eastern Siberia, and whether she will still think it necessary to actually carry out what seems up to the present time to have been only a declared intention.

If she did desist, it would undoubtedly withdraw her allies from a delicate position, but as she is now acting behind the curtain of an absolute censorship, it is impossible to say what is going on.

According to London dispatches the Teutonic peace negotiations with Rumania are on the verge of failure, but the reports from Berlin and Vienna assert that these negotiations are proceeding favorably. It is hard to see how Rumania can do anything else but conclude peace on the most favorable terms she can get in view of her military and economic situation, particularly as she is completely cut off from any form of aid by her by wireless.

Both the Austrian and German tion is the cession of the Batoum frontiers bordering on Switzerland were closed for an indefinite period at midnight Sunday. At the present writing the meaning of this sometimes significant action is now entirely clear.

It usually indicates that troop movements on a large scale are in progress and is sometimes but not always followed by a great increase in the activity on the adjoining fronts.

ACTIVITY INCREASING.

The western front is still increasing in activity. Raids continue numerous and on a steadily growing scale as to size, and from various points the artillery fighting is reported to be becoming more intense. All these episodes while individually unimportant considered in the aggregate take on a certain significance, and though apparently far from having yet reached the stage of climax, are, it would seem, developing in that direction, with a certain amount of speed.

General Allenby has made another small advance in Palestine to the north of Jerusalem. The campaign in Palestine will probably soon come to a close for the spring and summer, as hot weather is near at hand.

TELLS OF VISIT TO U. S. BATTLEFIELD

VISITS SCENE OF STRIFE.

On Monday morning I visited the scene of Friday's fight. A hard snow storm was raging, and many of the marks of the struggle were obscured, but at the same time the snow affords us protection from the Germans. The Boches are always watchful and ready in clear weather for sniping operations, machine gun firing and the use of trench mortars.

The scene of the struggle was clearly defined by unmistakable evidences of a concentrated bombardment. The shell craters overlapping each other pitted the ground like a photograph of the moon's surface. Three of them, at least fifteen feet deep, were already partly filled with water from melting snow.

The trench lines were badly blasted and it was nearly impossible to pick it out at places where the six dugouts were demolished by direct hits from shells of big calibre, probably ten-inch.

HAD ACCURATE RANGE.

A German battery recently spotted this sector with disconcerting accuracy. Many dugouts were unscathed, although several were caved in when great shells or minnenwerfers exploded nearby, casting up tons of earth. Many trees were uprooted or blasted as though struck by a cyclone. Equipment was scattered everywhere although much of it was hidden by the snow.

snow

Several concrete machine gun emplacements of the "pillbox" style weathered the hurricane of fire, and ammunition dug-outs also escaped.

Soldiers with rifles at hand, their heads protected by steel helmets and gas masks strapped to their chests, worked with picks and shovels reorganizing the positions. Wood for the construction of duck boards, concrete and rails of steel were brought up to reinforce and strengthen the works.

There was one long, disused trench, littered with debris, where a number of soldiers took refuge from the shells to organize their resistance and counter attack. It was littered with cartridge clips, torn gas masks and twisted helmets. Nearly all the German equipment had been carried off for souvenirs.

GREAT GAPS IN THE WIRE.

Through the snow we could see great gaps torn in the barbed wire and holes where the deeply planted posts had been torn up by the German guns and "hell boxes."

Re-wiring was accomplished with the greatest difficulty, owing to the activity of the German machine gunners.

Less Than 2,000,000 Available for Actual Fighting in Belgium and France

By HENRY G. WALES.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Feb. 14.—(By mail)—Despite reports, sedulously disseminated by enemy propagandists of colossal concentration of German, Austro-Hungarian, Bulgarian and Turkish troops along the Western front, it is now known that Field Marshal von Hindenburg has augmented his forces in Flanders and France with less than half a million men for his much vaunted offensive.

Furthermore, it is estimated that the total strength of the German armies opposing the French, British and American forces is approximately 3,500,000 men, of whom at the most 2,000,000 can be used in actual fighting.

Twenty new German divisions have appeared on the Western front since late in the Autumn, sixteen of them coming from the Russian front and four from the Italian theatre of war.

20,000 IN A DIVISION.

A German division comprises in all about 20,000 men, but that figure includes all branches of service. The bayonet or rifle strength of a division of 20,000 men is never above 13,000, and frequently drops as low as 7,500 in a division on an active sector where there is an extraordinary amount of work to be done behind the first line trenches. Ten thousand is a fair average of the fighting strength of a division today.

In the early part of February the strength by divisions of the central powers was allotted as follows, according to latest reports gleaned by the intelligence departments and secret services of the allied countries:

	German.	Austro-Hunga'n.	Bulga'n.	Turk
Russo-Rumanian	[illegible]	34	2	4
Macedonian	[illegible]	4	12	[illegible]
Mesopotamia	0	0	[illegible]	44

112 WERE IDENTIFIED.

Prior to December 1 there were 154 divisions on the western front. Of the present number 112 had been identified by raiding parties by the middle of February and 62 were in reserve at the various strategic centres along the front between the North Sea and the Swiss frontier.

Four German divisions were transferred from the Italian front at the end of December, leaving only three remaining there with Field Marshal Boerovic. Three Austrian divisions were removed from the Italian front also, but it is believed that they had been cut to pieces and were sent to the rear to be reformed rather than being sent to West Flanders as reported in the press.

There are now only 98 enemy divisions along the lengthy Russo-Rumanian front as compared with 115, prior to December 1. Formerly there were 77 German divisions holding the northerly end of the line, of which 16 have been sent to the West, leaving only 61. The Austrian strength has been maintained, there still being 33 divisions facing the Russian and Rumanian firing line.

"That's what my husband and I said to one another when one day we made the very startling discovery that although his salary had been increased several times since we married, we had not in all that time increased our savings one cent.

"It was easy to blame old H. C. of L. for our state of affairs, but we both confessed to being a bit ashamed.

"Only one suggestion could I offer—that I would try to save on clothes. I knew I had been extravagant at times and recalled how many times my thrifty sister had suggested that I was foolish not to 'look' in Filene's Basement.

MONOPOLY LAID TO PACKERS

Seized Mortgages of Dying Man in Belmont, Lawyer Charges

Amazing disclosures of how Swift & Company, the Chicago packers, actually "gobbled up" one more independent slaughter house here in Massachusetts while the Federal investigation of the packers was going on have been made to a committee of the Massachusetts Legislature.

The slaughter house was located in Belmont [illegible] the independent [illegible] on his death bed [illegible] bankruptcy [illegible] the Swift concern seized his mortgages according [illegible]

[illegible] New England [illegible] Swift [illegible] the Republican party was mentioned [illegible] the proceedings.

The disclosures were made jointly by Frederick [illegible] president of Batchelder & Snyder Company, who is a [illegible] of the War [illegible] Board [illegible] counsel of [illegible]

Attorney Taylor also charged that Batchelder & Snyder were involved in the latest seizure of an independent slaughter house by Chicago packers but Mr. Snyder's [illegible] denied it.

CHARGES SWIFT MONOPOLY.

President Snyder asserted that the Swifts have an absolute monopoly of the slaughtering business in this State.

Mr. Snyder [illegible] before the Legislative committee on Public Health [illegible]

"[illegible] established a slaughter [illegible] in Belmont [illegible] work. He [illegible] mortgage of [illegible] from [illegible] Savings bank [illegible] estate of [illegible] Products Company and he [illegible] two other mortgages [illegible] and the other of [illegible] held by Bessie M. Morse and [illegible] Baker.

"He got into financial difficulty and Batchelder & Snyder came in and took [illegible] An agent of Batchelder & Snyder came to the [illegible] suggested [illegible] there was not a way [illegible] may have been [illegible] He went to the Board of Health but [illegible] stood by Burke. Burke came to me with tears in his eyes and begged me to use my influence not to turn him out.

"Burke died [illegible] He was hard pressed. His mortgage was unpaid. We found later that the mortgage had been taken up by a man named Coburn of Lowell and that the attorney in the case was a man who had represented Swift & Co.

ASSIGNED MORTGAGE.

"Coburn later assigned the mortgage to a man named 'William A. Reed.' Who he is I don't know but [illegible] He holds the mortgage for Swift & Co. or Batchelder & Snyder. If there is any difference between the two companies I don't know."

Mr. Snyder, who had previously spoken, jumped to his feet and said:

"Swift & Co. have no interest in my company directly or indirectly. The mortgages of the Belmont company were taken up by a man who [illegible] of Swift & Co. and [illegible] assigned to a man who [illegible] office of Walter S. Glidden. I guess you know Glidden's connection with Swift & Co."

"How long ago were these mortgages taken up?" said a member of the committee.

"It all happened within the past eight months," said Mr. Snyder.

"When the Federal investigation of the packers was going on?"

"I should say so," replied Mr. Snyder.

The developments were occasioned by a hearing on Mr. Snyder's petition for a law to allow an appeal to the State Department of [illegible] from a decision by a local health board to revoke or [illegible] a license issued to any slaughtering house. Such a law is needed, Mr. Snyder asserted, to allow independents [illegible] to break into the monopolized territory where local boards are controlled by the big packing interests.

"The Swifts don't need the protection," he said. "They are solidly intrenched. It is for their interest to be concerned in politics.

CHARGES MONOPOLY.

"There is a monopoly of the slaughtering business in this State," he said.

He asserted that all but four or five of the slaughtering houses in the State are controlled by the Swifts through the Consolidated Rendering Company, a $9,000,000 corporation of which E. W. Swift is president and George A. Swift is vice-president. Among the local companies controlled by the Consolidated Rendering Company, he said, are:

Sales of railroad tickets of any kind in block to hotel porters or other unofficial agencies will be prohibited and cases of violation will be brought into the courts.

BACK LENROOT FOR WISCONSIN SENATOR

By International News Service.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 5.—Irvine L. Lenroot, representative in Congress, today has the indorsement of the Republican party of Wisconsin in his candidacy for the United States Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Paul O. Husting. Lenroot is a candidate on an out-and-out loyalty platform.

Francis E. McGovern, former Governor, who polled 45 votes as against 87 for Lenroot at the party caucus here, is expected to appear as a candidate against Lenroot at the primaries March 19.

James Thompson of LaCrosse, who has declared himself an independent, but who is regarded as a La Follette man, will be third Republican candidate at the primaries.

The Republicans in caucus adopted resolutions directing that a telegram pledging unswerving support be sent President Wilson. Clauses in the resolution condemn the war attitude of Senator La Follette.

BULGARIAN ENVOY GOES SOUTH, MAY LEAVE

By International News Service.

Washington, March 5.—The departure of Stephan Panaretoff, the Bulgarian Minister, from Washington, ostensibly for a vacation in Florida, was believed here today to forecast the severance of diplomatic relations with the Sofia government.

It was recalled that the Turkish charge d'affaires left in a somewhat similar fashion. So far as is known the Bulgarian Minister has engaged in no practices to which the government here has taken any exception. However, he has quoted President Wilson in defence of Bulgaria's attitude towards the Balkan problem, in an article in the last issue of the World Court Magazine, saying:

"It is to be hoped that the era of handing people about from sovereignty to sovereignty as if they were property" or of disregarding 'historically established lines of allegiance and nationality' is passed. The principle of nationality is the only rational way of settling the Balkan question and eliminating any cause for future strife and quarrels.

"In the settlement of the Balkan question historical rights or pretensions that go back to pre-Christian or mediaeval times can have no place. It is no more reasonable for the Greeks or the Serbians to claim Macedonia today as Greek or Serbian because Aristotle was born there or Byzantine rule prevailed off and on before the Turkish conquest, or because Serbian rule at some time or other in the middle ages extended over it than it would be reasonable for the Bulgarians to claim Epirus, Thessaly or Albania to its seacoast because these regions at certain periods of their history were comprised within the mediaeval kingdom of Bulgaria."

BILL SAFEGUARDS FAMILIES OF SOLDIERS

Civil Rights Bill Passes House; Gives Widest Protection to Fighters

By International News Service.

Washington, March 5.—[illegible] sweeping [illegible] fighting [illegible] approved [illegible] President Wilson's signature is expected [illegible] a day or so.

Under the provisions of the bill fighting [illegible] are protected against eviction for non-payment of rent, loss of life insurance through unpaid premiums, the execution of mortgages against their property, loss of homes on which part payment has been made, loss of property through non-payment of taxes or loss of a homestead through absence or non-payment of fees.

All this protection is given on the condition that a man's financial ability to meet his obligations has been materially affected by his military service.

The measure has been before Congress almost since the first of the war. Difficulties of drafting it and the protests of certain insurance, building companies, loan companies and similar interests delayed its passage.

MOST LIBERAL PROTECTION.

With the war risk insurance bill, it is declared by Administration leaders to make up the most liberal legislation in protection of a nation's fighters in history. Its final approval was by unanimous vote.

Its most important features follow:

A law suit cannot be settled against a man who is unable to appear by reason of military service. Courts must appoint attorneys for such defendants.

A law suit begun by a person who later enters military service may be postponed until the man in service is able to give it personal attention.

A soldier's wife or family cannot be evicted from any premises, rent for which does not exceed $50 a month. The court may inquire into all such cases and make such order as may be just. An attempt to evict shall be punishable by a $1,000 fine.

On homes being bought on instalment payments, the contract shall not be foreclosed for non-payment unless a court so decides after an investigation. The court may then order all payments to date refunded. The court may stay proceedings altogether.

INSURANCE POLICIES TO STAND.

Insurance is defined to include benefits from fraternal or benefit societies as well as commercial life insurance. Non-payments due to military service shall not invalidate the policy up to one year after the close of the war.

Non-payment of taxes cannot result in the sale of a fighter's property. This includes assessments and levies of every sort for either National, State or local governments.

Mine claims, timber claims and farm claims are guaranteed against foreclosure by the government either for failure to perform work, absence, non-payment of fees, or failure to make improvements.

General provisions are made that courts may enter such judgments in all cases as may be equitable both to the debtor and creditor.

Making of reasonable arrangements instead of enforcing the absolute provisions of the act against either party to suits under the bill is encouraged.

DRAFT INCOMES IF THIRD LOAN SHOULD FAIL

Representative Rainey Declares This Step Would Be Inevitable Alternate

Washington, March 5.—Conscription of income is inevitable if the next Liberty Loan is not a success, Representative Rainey of Illinois, ranking Democratic member of the House Ways and Means Committee, declared today.

Mr. Rainey was concerned over current reports that the country is not ready to float another war bond issue, but said he was confident the next loan would be over-subscribed. He did not believe, however, that the original plan to float a $[illegible] bond issue would be carried out.

Failure of a war loan is unheard of," he said. "If the third Liberty Loan fails the situation must be met with drastic measures. The country never was in better financial condition.

Passage of the railroad bill and the war financial corporation bill should smooth the path for the loan by keeping up the prices of securities. The only remedy, in event of the loan's failure, is a proportional conscription of the incomes of all Americans.

"The trouble is that all the bonds thus far issued have been bought by one set of people. These people now have all the bonds they can afford, and we must reach the others who have not subscribed—the people who have more profitable uses for their money."

Women watchers stood just outside the polls so they would hear everything that went on inside.

The women were late in appearing at the polls. But Miss Mary Garrett Hay, chairman of the local suffrage organization, explained the situation as follows:

Ten o'clock is a little too early for the women to get around, as they have to see the men off to work, you know. But just wait until they get the breakfast things out of the way and the children settled for the day and they'll all be in line."

AUTO MAKERS FLOCK IN FROM MIDDLE WEST

A. I. Philp of Dodge Brothers Gives Luncheon in Boston Today

Motor car manufacturers have come on from the Middle West in larger numbers than usual to visit the Boston Show, because they wish to learn at first hand the answer that New England will make to the question of how many vehicles will be needed for the New England trade. The Boston Show is the motor mart of this part of the country, and the business done here is the barometer for the year.

Among the most prominent of the manufacturers to arrive yesterday was A. I. Philp, general sales manager of Dodge Brothers of Detroit, who is making his first visit to Boston in several years. To Mr. Philp is credited one of the greatest merchandising successes ever achieved in the motor vehicle industry, the history of which is replete with sensational successes.

Mr. Philp had a national reputation as a sales manager before he joined the Dodge Brothers organization. He had been sales manager of the Studebaker corporation and before that vice-president and sales manager of Morgan & Wright and manager of the central district organization of the United States Tire Company. He has traveled the country from end to end and knew the [illegible] for [illegible] cars of every [illegible] and [illegible] every town and hamlet.

In order that the Dodge Brothers dealers throughout New England might have an opportunity to see Mr. Philp and hear from his own lips the optimistic views he takes of the motor car and commercial car situation throughout the country, a luncheon is to be held this noon at the Copley-Plaza, at which he will be the principal speaker.

EAST BOSTON BOY IS BURNED BY HOT LEAD

William O'Meara, twenty-two, of No. 690 Bennington street, East Boston, is at the East Boston Relief Station suffering from severe burns of the face, nose and forehead. He was dipping lead blocks in a mold at the Boston Lockport Block Company, Border street, East Boston, where he is employed, when the hot metal spattered on him.

W. C. SILLS who says auto stands ready to carry the commerce and people of the world.

W. C. Sills, general manager of sales of the Chevrolet Motor Company, who is given credit for starting the movement to eliminate the words "pleasure cars" from the automobile vocabulary and to place the passenger automobile in a true light in this country, arrived in Boston yesterday to spend a day or two at the Automobile Show.

Transportation is the basis of greater activity, action and development; it is the foundation of progress," he said when seen at the Copley-Plaza.

"The automobile will, if anything, increase in usefulness," he continued. "It will be, more than ever before, appreciated.

"The automobile stands ready to carry the commerce and people of the world. The automobile is ready right now, to assist the railroads of the country in this work. The motor car will come into its own as a great factor in present-day events.

"The question of transportation is more important today than at any time in the history of the world. And the word now has a different meaning owing to the automobile, which, in a measure, has revolutionized common methods of conveyance.

"The automobile is playing an important part in present world events, a greater and more prominent position than the founders ever hoped it would have."

MOTOR TRUCKS RELIEVE R. R. CONGESTION

Federal Company's General Manager Cites Many Problems Solved

Every important national problem, the coal shortage, the railroad tie-ups, the labor scarcity and many phases of the great war preparation and execution difficulties, have been immeasurably relieved by the use of the motor truck, according to Martin L. Pulcher, vice-president and general manager of the Federal Motor Truck Company.

"Each of these problems, aside from the railroad congestion, has its own special transportation trouble and the motor truck has gone nobly to the rescue," said Mr. Pulcher. "And at the outset, I know why the motor truck has been called upon so generally to help. In our motor truck advertising we have been able to show what a great help our trucks could be and the public has grasped the idea with gratifying results. The fuel situation would have been indefinitely worse if the country had depended upon anything but motor trucks to swiftly convey coal from the railroad cars to consumers and thus quickly release the railroad cars for service. Moreover, trucks have aided immeasurably in hauling wood from the country to wood yards and to the homes of consumers.

"We have one remarkable instance of where a Federal truck released a locomotive for service in helping straighten out the great traffic tangle. This is in the form of a letter from Mr. F. S. Austin, general storekeeper for the Boston & Albany Railroad at West Springfield, Mass. This truck was put into general use by the storekeeper's department.

"In his letter, Mr. Austin says that besides doing away with the use of an engine, which it was necessary to have in handling material between Springfield and West Springfield, the truck did away with all trucking charges, which had amounted to about $75 per month. The truck also saves a great deal of demurrage by handling material between the storehouse at West Springfield and the freight house at Springfield. He reports that the truck also saves considerable time in emergency cases, where material is desired at different points immediately.

"Farmers in all parts of the country are saving [illegible] time by use of trucks. The country would be in a hopeless fix in the transportation of foodstuffs if they could not depend upon the immense number of motor trucks that are quickly and efficiently doing the great bulk of this work.

"And the splendid part of it is that the trucks are doing the work at a much less cost. The truck has proven itself the logical, practical answer to the haulage problems of the nation, because it is the economical medium for this work."

POLICE TO CENSOR PROVIDENCE CABARETS

Providence, March 5.—Cabarets will hereafter be censored by Police Censor Richard H. Gamble as a result of a crusade by club women who objected to this form of entertainment. Women charge "[illegible]" dancers and young women in scant attire move among tables in cafes and sip from glasses held by men. In order to solve the problem the Police Commissioners have put the cabaret shows up to the police censor. Complaints of [illegible] singing accompanied by discordant piano playing in down-town cafes have started the cleanup.

CUT BAER SEED BILL FROM 50 MILLION TO 10

Washington, March 5.—The rewritten Baer seed and feed bill was before the House Agricultural Committee. Its appropriation was cut from $50,000,000 to $10,000,000. Of the total to supply feed and $[illegible] would be used to supply seed to farmers on credit, not more than $1,500,000 to supply feed and $1,500,000 would be [illegible] to mobilize farm labor. Under [illegible] section farmers will be permitted to borrow money from the government to advance [illegible] wages to prospective workers.

PSYCHOLOGICAL MARVEL NOW READY FOR GERMANS

The late Prof. Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard once pronounced Thomas J. Abernethy, a student at Harvard, a psychological marvel. The Maine youngster is now out to make a number of Germans aware of that fact, as he has been commissioned as a second lieutenant in the aviation section of the Signal Corps.

Abernethy, who is more than six feet tall, gave up the idea of devoting his psychological ability to the [illegible] with the declaration of war.

The Chevrolet Sedan is such a car as you would have made to your order.

In appearance, in appointments, in its power plant, in year-'round practical usefulness, it conforms to the stable basis upon which real motor-car value is judged.

Its famed valve-in-head motor does not depend on seasons for its efficiency—it serves loyally and economically whether the weather be wintry or tropical.

Precise manufacturing is further evidenced in the fine coach building that is a noticeable feature of the Chevrolet Sedan. It is socially correct in design; beautiful to a degree that exemplifies the progress that has been made in building this type of body.

FEDERAL
New England's First Choice

Eight years ago the first Federal sale was made in New England.

From that first sale has grown a national institution. Today, back of every Federal is a concern that has grown in eight years from a $50,000 to a $3,000,000 corporation without reorganization, recapitalization or change of management.

This means permanence, stability, strength. It is a guarantee of Federal sturdy construction and dependability.

The Daylight Saving committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce has received from several [illegible] expressions of opinion in answer to the objections to the daylight saving plan raised by [illegible] Professor E. Professor Turner of Oxford takes this statement. He says: "[illegible] and the second hand of the clock are very distinctly [illegible] of astronomers and it would be grievous to interfere with them, but the hour hand belongs to the public and may be regulated to suit their convenience as in the hourly changes in the United States."

Sir Henry Norman, a member of the British parliament, writes: "With regard to navigation, to which reference has been made by opponents of the plan, they will be affected in no way whatever. When they are at sea they will do precisely as they do now. When they are in port they will adjust their ships' clocks to the local time as they have always been in the habit of doing."

CHARGE POLICE PROTECT CLUB GAMBLERS

Allege Authorities Visit Den Near Providence City Hall as "Matter of Form"

Providence, March [illegible].—How to suppress [illegible] clubs is worrying police officials here, although they say no complaints have been made to them.

[illegible] women [illegible] credited [illegible] proprietors of a wide open gambling house under the eaves of the City Hall. The club is [illegible] known as "Bennie" and "Johnnie," and [illegible] gamblers allege the place is protected by a State official.

REPORT BIG LOSSES.

Reports of heavy losses are heard about the corners where gamblers are known to congregate. An investigator for [illegible] women report the following conversation overheard in an all-night cafe relative to gambling clubs in the city.

"The [illegible] for $350 at 'Bennie's' last night. I dropped $200 there last week. Say, they have the biggest game in the State at Johnnie's and Bennie's.

"That's the reason the other fellows are putting up the scream. The [illegible] of the Weybosset street clubs split $1,000 every month before the Washington street club opened. I'm glad Johnnie and Bennie are getting the money. They are a couple of good fellows and have the right kind of backing."

POLICE TAKE NAMES.

The conversation referred to occurred near the club. A man known as a gambler explained that the police visit the clubs occasionally and take the names of all present. This is said to be a "matter of form." Police officials say they have had no complaints that gambling is conducted in the city.

Clubwomen say it is necessary to have a "movie" demonstration of the game in real progress to convince the police. The demand for club licenses issued by the police commissioners are said to be sought by men desiring ideal gambling sites.

QUITS PULPIT TO MAKE SAILS FOR U. S. FLEET

Portland, Me., March 5.—The Rev. Wilmot P. Lord, a member of the Maine Methodist Conference, has quit the pulpit to enter the United States navy as a sailmaker and has been ordered to the Kittery Navy Yard. At his own request Mr. Lord was left without a pastorate by the last conference. Over the age limit he was unable to get a berth as chaplain in either the army or navy. In his youth he was an expert sailmaker so he succeeded in enlisting in that branch.

A brother, Herbert M. Lord, is also a navy sailmaker stationed at the Charlestown, Mass., yard.

VAST STORE OF FOOD VALUE IN FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE

Scientific Tests Prove That It Is

6 Times More Nourishing Than Milk
7½ " " " " Oysters
2½ " " " " Steak
5 " " " " Cod Fish

That Father John's Medicine contains a vast store of food value and strength-building, energy-producing elements is established by recent scientific tests. This rich nourishment is in a form which is more easily taken up by the system than the common foods we eat and has many times greater food value.

Father John's Medicine is six times more nourishing than pure milk; it contains two and one-half times as much nourishment as an equal quantity of beef steak. Father John's Medicine is seven and one-half times more nourishing than an equal quantity of oysters and five times more nourishing than cod fish.

These scientific tests made by expert chemists prove beyond question the very great food value of this old-fashioned, pure, wholesome medicine for colds, coughs and body-building. Because it supplies the nourishment which you do not obtain from your food and supplies it in the form which the system most easily takes up and turns into tissue, muscle, flesh and strength. Father John's Medicine has had more than sixty years of success as a food tonic for those who are weak and run-down.

In our daily lives we burn up a certain amount of energy or tissue and we must have a nourishing, food-tissue builder to make good this daily wear and tear on the system. While the food we eat is changed into this tissue or energy if the digestive system is in healthy condition; when we become weakened, over-tired or run-down we do not get the required amount of nourishment from our food, and it is at such a time that the wonderful strength-building, tissue-forming elements of Father John's Medicine prove their greatest value.

It is guaranteed that Father John's Medicine positively does not contain any alcohol or any dangerous, habit-forming drugs or opiates. It is a pure and wholesome, nourishing tonic food,—a doctor's prescription, not a patent medicine. Begin taking it today.

Consolation in Court Ruling for Suffrage Pickets of White House

By International News Service.

Washington, March 5.—Two hundred and eighteen suffragist pickets, who were arrested for flaunting their banners in front of the White House, and of whom a majority served jail sentences, have the consolation that they could not be put in jail for that. The Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia has ruled so.

There are 218 women considering bringing suit against the District Commissioners and the jailers who could not put them in jail but did so. More definite, however, is the jubilation over the more immediate prospect of collecting $100,000 damages already sued for by eight of the pickets in a test case filed about three months ago.

The pickets who appealed their cases and won were Mrs. Pauline Adams of Norfolk, Miss Vivian Pierce of San Diego, Cal.; Miss Maud Jamison of Norfolk, Miss Lucy Burns of Brooklyn, Mrs. Gertrude Hunter of Minneapolis, Mrs. Clara Kramer of Little Falls, Minn.; Mrs. Mary Lockwood and Mrs. Kate Broeckh of Washington, D. C.; Miss Caroline Beach of Louisville and Miss Margaret Fotheringham of Buffalo.

SAUGUS COMMITTEE BUYS CARLOAD OF PIGS

Charles L. Smith, chairman of the Food Production Committee of Saugus, announced today that his committee has purchased a carload of pigs which will be sold to residents at cost. The pigs will arrive within a week or ten days and will be the first allowed in the town since two years ago when the Board of Health forbade anyone to keep them. The purchase is a war measure, designed to lower the cost of living and at the same time follow out the government suggestion of reducing the pork surplus.

MEMBERS IN SERVICE; CLERKS' HIRE CUT OFF

Washington, March 5.—Three Congressmen who have entered military service have had their clerk hire cut off by the auditing officials of the House. Their friends are planning a fight against what they term unfair discrimination. The three men, LaGuardia of New York, Heintz of Ohio and Johnson of South Dakota, Republicans, have attempted to draw no pay for themselves while absent from Washington. Their names are still called, however, on all roll calls, and they are officially members of the House.

TO RESTRICT VISITORS TO HARBOR INSTITUTIONS

Persons desiring to visit inmates at the Harbor Municipal Institutions will be obliged to subject themselves to rigid examinations and will be confined to passes issued from the United States Marshal's office if suggestions offered to Marshal Mitchell by Penal Institutions Commissioner David B. Shaw are accepted. Commissioner Shaw points out that a person under the guise of an innocent visitor to the institution has an excellent opportunity to observe many government activities along the waterfront and on the islands where municipal buildings are located.

Physicians Explain Why Women Need More Iron in their Blood Today than 20 Years Ago

Say Anaemia—Lack of Iron is Greatest Curse to the Health, Strength, Vitality and Beauty of the Modern American Woman.

DR. FERDINAND KING, New York Physician and Medical author, says physicians should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to supply the iron deficiency. Opinions of Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City; Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, and other physicians who have thoroughly tested the value of Nuxated Iron.

Any woman who tires easily, is nervous or irritable, or looks pale, haggard, and worn should at once have her blood examined for iron deficiency—administration of simple Nuxated Iron will often increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, careworn women in from ten to fourteen days' time.

"There can be no strong, healthy, beautiful rosy-cheeked women without iron," says Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York physician and Medical Author. "I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard-looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of an anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby, the muscles lack tone, the brain fags, and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks.

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss. Therefore, you should supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But so many American women suffer from iron deficiency with its attendant ills that I deem it my duty to advise such to take Nuxated Iron. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

The Child's Appeal—What Is Your Answer?

"Mother, why don't you take NUXATED IRON and be strong and well and have nice rosy cheeks instead of being so nervous and irritable all the time and looking so haggard and old—The doctor gave some to Susie Smith's mother and she was worse off than you are and now looks years younger and feels just fine."

You can tell the women with plenty of iron in their blood—beautiful healthy rose cheeked women full of Life, Vim and Vitality—while those who lack iron are often cross, nervous, irritable, weak, tired, complaining creatures whom nobody wants to have around.

Dr. [illegible], a physician of many years experience in this country and who has [illegible] in England, says: "I did not make a practice of recommending advertised medicinal products, but I have found Nuxated Iron so potent in nervous run-down conditions that I believe all should know of it. The men and women of today need [illegible] than was the case twenty or thirty years ago. This has been so [illegible] the demands called [illegible] homes and also because of the demand [illegible] greater [illegible] necessary to offset the greater number of health hazards [illegible] at every turn."

Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician, who has studied both in this country and in great European Medical institutions, says: "I am a great believer in Nuxated Iron. If people would only take it when they feel weak or run down instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcohol [illegible] convinced there are thousands who might readily build up their red blood corpuscles, increase their physical energy and get themselves in a condition to ward off the millions of disease germs that are almost continually around us. It is surprising how many people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know of it."

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York and Westchester County Hospital, says: "Thousands of persons go on suffering year after year, doctoring themselves for [illegible] when the real and true cause underlying their condition is simply a lack of sufficient iron in the red blood corpuscles to enable Nature to transform the food they eat into brawn, muscle tissue and brain. But beware [illegible] metallic iron which frequently does more harm than good.

Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well-known physicians [illegible] with [illegible] because [illegible] would advise readers in all cases to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to the trouble [illegible] only Nuxated Iron [illegible] and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package. If you have taken other iron preparations without success, this does not prove that Nuxated Iron will not help you; it is an entirely different thing from [illegible].

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

Miss Alice Carpenter Heads Committee to Plan for Athletic Training

Miss Alice Carpenter, chairman of the Woman's Naval Service and the Naval Auxiliary of the Red Cross, has nearly completed the task of raising $25,000 for the [illegible] of athletic training in all of the fifteen aviation centres in this country.

Miss Carpenter is putting into the work [illegible] she formerly [illegible] and is assured of success. The fund was started [illegible] the suggestion of Walter Camp that athletic trainers be assigned to aviation camps.

This is but one of the many things which the two organizations are doing for the benefit of men in the service. "We have under way the installation of a swimming pool at Pelham Bay Training Station," said Miss Carpenter. "This will cost $7,000. Then we plan at least two lodging houses where [illegible] in the city for the nominal sum of twenty-five cents."

There are 3,000 knitters working in association with the two organizations and many garments are furnished when called for by the Red Cross. A camp and barracks for women at Farmingdale has also been established, where 100 were trained in farming through the co-operation of the New York State School of Agriculture, which Miss Carpenter stated was a great success.

In co-operation with the New York Cooking School the service has [illegible] for the navy, and has provided 98[illegible] sailors with comforts.

It has provided hospital bases with [illegible] and [illegible] a club for soldiers and sailors at No. 5[illegible] Seventh avenue, one for sailors at No. [illegible] street, Brooklyn, and a hostess house at the Pelham Bay training station. NOT A PARTICLE OF DANDRUFF OR A FALLING HAIR

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing; your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter for a few cents and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.—Advertisement.

FULLERTON TAKES UP MANAGERIAL OUTLOOK FOR COMING SEASON

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

There are many new twists and turns in the great game of the diamond for the coming season, but the most important one to figure on is: Miller Huggins goes to the New York Yankees; Jack Hendricks, a tried and successful minor leaguer, takes the St. Louis Cardinals, Ed Barrow, a veteran with wide experience in baseball and darned little in the active playing part of the game of recent years, takes the strong Red Sox—his inaugural experience was two years in Detroit; Rowland, the "Busher" of the last two seasons, has won his spurs; Hugo Bezdek promises to become one of the most popular, even if least successful, managers as leader of the Pirates. Fielder Jones may even now retire.

There is a new school of management springing up, and each of the new managers is bringing new theories into the game.

OWNERS PLAY BIGGER PART.

Besides all that, the element of ownership is entering more and more into baseball.

No fewer than five major league clubs are owned by men who insist upon dominating the management itself.

Such conditions, of course, hurt the teams, and we must figure how this ownership by press agenting and publicity seeking men will affect the playing strength of the clubs.

We must figure how they will be affected by the war, how they have been affected thus far, how the new system of management will affect them and whether or not the owners will cut in and upset all the dope by insisting upon "helping" manage the team.

In the ownership problem we must figure the Chicago Cubs, the Brooklyn team, the Boston Americans, the Philadelphia Nationals, and the Pittsburgh team.

SOME NEW PROBLEMS.

Also there are indicatons that Phil Ball, of the St. Louis Browns, has not yet learned to permit his manager to manage the team.

He had a lesson last season which should have shown him that one man must have full authority, but, on top of this, we find him issuing notices that Jones must do so and so and must enforce discipline.

Incidentally, Ball's attitude last season did more to prevent Jones from enforcing discipline than anything else.

However, it is not for us to regret or censure, but to figure how these outside influences will affect teams.

We will start the doping this season by studies of each team and the conditions surrounding it.

After that we will delve into the realms of pure dope, compare the teams position by position, and then reduce the position strength of each team to figure which will apply to the schedule and figure out where each team ought to finish.

In the next article we will take up the Chicago White Sox; first, because it has suffered less loss than almost any club in either circuit; and second, because it is practically intact and stands on its strength of last year.

There are several things about the White Sox that the fans generally do not know, and which may affect their strength in the race.

Fullerton Noted for Picking Ball Winners

HUGH FULLERTON'S Spring "dope" on the major league teams is considered one of the big features of every Spring by the followers of the pastime.

A year ago this time the famous writer and statistician sized up the teams with uncanny accuracy.

He picked the winners in each league and with one or two minor exceptions named the order of the October finishes.

In this annual Spring prophecy Fullerton will show the strength and weakness of each club in the two big circuits and will predict in cold figures the final standing of each team.

Fullerton's articles will be published daily in The American.

BY JAMES J. CORBETT.

THIS is the fourteenth chapter of a series which James J. Corbett is writing on "John L. as I Knew Him." It relates many heretofore unpublished incidents in the life of the great warrior. The next instalment will appear tomorrow.

England, the home of pugilism, gave a rousing greeting to John L. Sullivan when he arrived there in the latter part of 1887. During his whole tour the great American was accorded tremendous ovations.

In that country, as in his own, he took on men as fast as they were pitted against him and stopped all of them within four rounds. It was the first time that England had ever seen a fighter of Sullivan's type and the country went wild over him.

"The Prince of Wales wants you to give a private exhibition for him."

Royalty meant nothing to John L. and he couldn't figure why he should give a private exhibition for anyone. So he answered:

"If he wants to see me why doesn't he pay to get in the same as the rest of the people?"

JOHN L. CONSENTS TO BOX.

It was explained then to the champion that it was a great honor for anyone to be asked to give a private exhibition for the heir apparent to the throne of England. So at last John L. consented to appear in private before the future King Edward of England.

At that time Arthur Brisbane was a London correspondent for one of the American papers. John L. was very fond of Brisbane and had promised him that he would be sure to take him along, so that he might be one of the witnesses of the private exhibition before the Prince of Wales. But a day or so before the affair was to take place, Brisbane went to Sullivan and said:

"They are going to bar newspapermen from that affair and I cannot go along with you."

Sullivan answered:

"You're going along with me, Arthur, and if they don't let you in I don't give any show for the Prince of Wales or anybody else."

So [illegible] insisted that Arthur Brisbane go along with him. When they reached Her Majesty's Barracks, where the affair was to be staged, the doorman, recognizing John L., greeted him and said:

"Pass through."

DOORMAN CHANGES MIND.

John L. [illegible] his arm [illegible] Brisbane's. When the doorman saw that John L. was taking Brisbane along with him he exclaimed:

"Your friend can't go in, Mr. Sullivan."

John L. glared at him and bellowed:

"You're wrong, Mister. He can and he will. Get out of my way or I'll [illegible] my fist right through your chest."

The doorman took one look at Sullivan's [illegible] and moved out of the way, giving clear passage for the entrance of Sullivan and Brisbane.

Hardly had the pair entered the place where the exhibition was to be put on when a dozen members of the royal retinue recognized an American newspaper man with Sullivan. At once they rushed at John L., [illegible] him aside and said:

"We are sorry, Mr. Sullivan, but your friend will have to withdraw."

[illegible] Sullivan.

"[illegible] he's a newspaper man."

"You're right, he is," growled John L., "and a mighty good newspaper man, too. He is a friend of mine and he came this [illegible] stay and see it through so he can write an article about me appearing before the Prince."

SULLIVAN WINS POINT

"But my dear fellow," [illegible] the spokesman, "His Royal Highness has sent special [illegible] to exclude all newspaper [illegible]."

A look of disgust [illegible] John L.'s face as he replied:

"Gentlemen, this here newspaper man is a friend of mine and either he stays and sees me put on my act or there ain't going to be [illegible] act. That goes, and [illegible] tell His Royal Highness [illegible] exactly what I said."

The attendants of the son [illegible] of King Edward of England took one look at the [illegible] of John L. Sullivan and Arthur Brisbane stayed and reviewed the performance.

John L. always aimed [illegible]. He figured that [illegible] exhibition merely with Jack Ashton [illegible] sparring partner, would [illegible] very much of an [illegible] for the Prince of Wales. So John L. in a friendly way [illegible] his hand [illegible] royal shoulder and said:

BOXES BEFORE THE PRINCE.

"Well," said John L., "I'm a little out of condition [illegible] I guess I can put up a pretty good showing against this fellow Smith who is one of your best heavyweights. He is here [illegible] to box with [illegible] Greenfield, but if he will [illegible] instead of with Greenfield, I'll try to show you what a real performance is like."

"Oh, that would be most interesting," said His Royal Highness.

So Sullivan went to Smith and asked him to box. But Smith took one look at Sullivan and decided that he would much rather work out with Greenfield. The challenge of John L. was rejected and the American gave his exhibition by sparring with his American partner.

After the exhibition, John L., reeking with perspiration, [illegible] breathing like a [illegible] jumped out of the ring and [illegible] over to the Prince of Wales.

"How did you like it?"

"Oh, very interesting, indeed," answered the Prince.

"Say, I heard you were in Boston when I was a young fellow," said Sullivan to the Prince of Wales.

"Yes, I was, and I found it a most interesting [illegible]," was the royal reply.

"Well," said John L., "when you get to Boston again [illegible] look me up. Everybody there knows me and they will tell you where I can be found."

Their Married Life

A NARRATIVE OF EVERYDAY AFFAIRS

Helen and Warren Come to an Agreement Over Reading After Dr. Marshall Offers a Suggestion

"WHAT a lot of tommyrot," said Warren [illegible] with a [illegible] personality [illegible] charm [illegible] the authors of th s sentimental twaddle get their [illegible] like that, not a bit of it. If people would only write books that dealt with real people and real things there would be more books that would live longer than just during the time it takes the printer's ink to dry [illegible]."

"What did you take the trouble to read it for then?" [illegible]

"I [illegible] close [illegible]

"Well, then, it served a good purpose, [illegible]."

"No, it did not. I'm angry at myself now for spending the time on it. It [illegible] nice and pleasant while it lasts, and then the worlds looks gloomier than ever. Anything that serves as a drug is not a good thing."

Different Matter

"That's a different matter altogether," began Warren when the doorbell rang and interrupted what he was going to say. He came back a moment later, followed by Dr. Marshall, the young physician who lived on the first floor.

"It's almost providential that you happened in," Helen said, giving him her hand. "Warren has been railing against fiction of all kinds right after he has finished one of the new books. It took him three evenings to read it, too. Isn't he consistent?"

"Well, what do you think, old man?" interrupted Warren. "Do you approve of them? I'll bet you never open one."

"Well, Warren, the doctor has to read a certain amount of medical data to keep up with his profession, don't you?" said Helen.

Dr. Marshall had lighted his pipe and had settled down for a good talk. Now he grinned boyishly.

"Yes, of course," he assented, "and I think it is a good thing for every one to read good stuff regularly, but I must confess I do like a good yarn once in a while and read at least [illegible] whatever I can spare the time."

"Well, what do you think of that, Warren?" asked Helen, triumphantly.

"But you never read anything but light things," Warren scoffed.

"Why, yes, I do, Warren. I try to read books that bear on present-day problems and situations and I have to do a certain amount of reading for my club papers."

"Huh," jeered Warren, "those club papers are funny. She belongs to some new-fangled library," he said, turning to Dr. Marshall, "and gets the new books as fast as they are published, regardless of whether they are good or not. I maintain that most of them present things in an altogether wrong manner. [illegible] they exaggerate [illegible] happenings and make a woman of [illegible] type moody and expectant of more from life than she ever [illegible]."

"But you just finished one of [illegible]," protested Helen.

"I know it, but it happened to be [illegible] interested. Even so, I feel [illegible] now that I devoted the time [illegible] when I might have been read[illegible] in the news[illegible]."

"He [illegible] is like a drug," [illegible] Helen. "What do you [illegible]?"

[illegible] slowly [illegible] right, but we are [illegible] their place [illegible] a great many [illegible] life [illegible] and if [illegible] truth is stranger than fiction. [illegible] for enjoying a good [illegible] and I don't see a [illegible] you should be [illegible] I think it is good for you to change your [illegible] and get [illegible] atmosphere [illegible] while just as I think that [illegible] good for Mrs. Curtis to read the [illegible] and a few of the [illegible] to balance her fondness for fiction."

Sensible Way

"That's a sensible way of looking at it," said Warren heartily. "I think you're right."

"And so do I," assented Helen quickly, "and I must confess that I don't give as much time to the newspapers as I should. Sometimes Warren finds me [illegible] ignorant. It's such a temptation to lose oneself in a good novel."

"Well, we'll both turn over a new leaf," said Warren promptly. "I'll read more fiction and you keep up [illegible] the latest news. And [illegible] I'm starving and I think the doctor needs some nourishment after [illegible] so wisely."

Puss in Boots Jr.

By David Cory

"NOW, the next task which I must perform," said Mr. Hercules to little Puss Junior as they journeyed on together, "as I mentioned in the story before this, is to bring back with me the oxen who live on an island in the West close to the setting sun."

So on and on went Mr. Hercules and little Puss Junior and by and by them came to a great mountain.

"Dear me," said Mr. Hercules, "it's too much trouble to cross over that high mountain." So he split the mountain in two and left half on each side, and ever since that time the geographies have called the water that flows between the Straits of Gibraltar. So please don't forget when you study [illegible] that it was Mr. [illegible] that [illegible] the rock of [illegible].

Well [illegible] they came to the island [illegible] oxen were. But [illegible] two-headed [illegible] them, and a [illegible].

"More trouble and then some more," said Mr. [illegible] wasn't [illegible] He sharpened the [illegible] club and [illegible] and after [illegible] giant was [illegible] and then Mr. [illegible] trouble at all in driving the oxen back to his home.

Well, Mrs. Hercules [illegible] glad to see Puss and [illegible] learned how Puss had helped Hercules by burning the [illegible] heads with his flaming [illegible] invited our little traveler [illegible] with them, but Puss replied he must be on his way, so [illegible] said goodby and started off, and after awhile—not so very long—he came to the country of the [illegible].

They were only thirteen inches tall and when they worked [illegible] cornfields the tops of the cornstalks seemed like little trees to them. And while Puss stood watching them a great flock of cranes came flying through the sky, and then they swooped down and began to steal the ears of corn.

"[illegible] the Puss Junior!" cried the dwarfs. So Puss drew his sword and rushed at the cranes and when they saw him with his flaming feather in his cap they took wing and flew away.

So Puss set off once again and by and by he came to the great blue sea. It was now nearing evening and as Puss was weary with his journey he sat himself down on a rock to rest. And while he sat there, as he looked across the sky he saw a man wading through the water.

On his head was a [illegible], and he came nearer the [illegible] of the Ocean, whose name was Neptune, drove by [illegible] his [illegible] horses with brazen hoofs and golden manes. And the king of the [illegible] held in his right hand a great spear, with three points, which he used to stir up the winds or to subdue the storms.

King of the stormy sea am I, sang Neptune, and then he beckoned to Puss, but what happened after that you must wait to hear in the next story.

A Fish's Armor

The possession of a complete armor is very common among [illegible] as a matter of fact the scales of fish, when of sufficient size and thickness, and covering the greater part of the body, form a most effective protection against injury. Some fish are completely encased in a dense bony armor coving the entire body. The eyes, all the fins, the lips and other small necessary apertures alone are movable, these appearing in openings at the side where they occur, held in position by surrounding tough skin.

"Some One Is Waiting for You"

The "Greater Mother Love" Song Which Carries a Message to Every Family With a Boy Fighting for His Country

A NEW song has taken the country by storm. It is a song that makes universal plea through its appeal to mother love.

"Some One Is Waiting for You," written by the composer of "Send Me Away with a Smile," one of the great song successes of recent years, bids fair to take its place as one of the most popular of our war-time songs.

And tho' he's away, she prays night and day,
No harm will come to her own.
So while you are longing remember, my boy,

CHORUS.

Some one is waiting for some one she loves,
Tho' some one is far, far away;
Some one is wond'ring where some one can be,
And longing for him day by day.
Just try for a while, and think what she's been through,
She gave up her all, yes, her life, just for you.
She did more than her share, now it's your turn to care,
For one who's waiting for you.

When but a child she kept watch over you,
And dreamed what a man you would be.
As older you grew, 'twas then that she knew
The dreams that she dreamed had come true

CHORUS.

Some one is waiting for some one she loves,
Tho' some one is far, far away;
She gave him up for the cause she thought right,
With a broken heart now she must pay.
When "All's said and done," and the fighting is through,
Remember that she fought as bravely as you,
So then just say a prayer, when it's all over there,
For some one who's waiting for you.

EPISODE 12

"The Eyes in the Wall"

Copyright 1918 by the Star Company

RAMSAY, who had watched the [illegible], now began pumping a [illegible] at the Hidden Hand, who leaped into a nearby window and escaped.

Stunned, but uninjured, Doris joined Ramsay on the street and they returned to the housekeeper's, [illegible] the [illegible] unbearable. Joyfully the housekeeper gathered Doris in her arms.

A Further Clew

"I saw the Hidden Hand," she exclaimed. "I would swear it is your Uncle Abner wearing a false beard. He wants your estate and is trying to prove you are not his brother's daughter."

"Are you sure?" exclaimed Doris.

"Well, it's either Abner or Dr. Scarley," replied the housekeeper, who showed signs of doubt for all her first assurance.

"Precisely," broke in Ramsay. "It is either this one or that one, or someone else. The fact remains that you must be better protected and that we must redouble our efforts to get the explosive packet from the Hidden Hand."

An hour late in the Whitney library Doris' Uncle Abner sat beside a broken French window eyeing a note which he read with narrow eyes. Having driven Doris out for her failure to prove her identity, he was master of the Whitney millions, but not master of his fate.

Again he looked at the letter and motioned to the butler. "This came through the window," said Abner, wrapped about a rock and evidently thrown from the lawn."

"I can't understand it, sir," said the butler. "I heard no noise."

Abner looked at him quickly and again at the note which read:

"Abner Whitney—Surrender your search for me or you will die.
"THE HIDDEN HAND."

He moistened his lips and ordered the butler to get him a drink. The butler was gone but an instant when a noise sounded within a few feet of the great library table and a laugh rang out. Abner leaped to his feet to face Dr. Scarley, whose revolver pointed steadily.

Signs of Terror

"A thousand dollars, quick!" demanded Scarley.

"So you are the Hidden Hand who sent me this threat," cried Abner, and tossed the note to the table.

Still covering him, Scarley read it and viewed the broken window. "Writing letters to yourself, eh?" he sneered. "You may fool the others, but you can't fool me. Shell out, quick!"

Abner lowered his hands, reaching to get the money, and in the instant that Scarley was off guard he leaped at him, shouting for help. As they struggled, the butler ran into the room. With a curse, Scarley flung Abner from him and leaped out the window with Abner's wallet in his hand.

Helped to his feet by the butler, Abner showed signs of terror. He telephoned to the housekeeper's apartment and offered to completely surrender the estate to Doris if Ramsay would protect him. Though Dorris was for refusing, Ramsay overruled her and promised Abner protection.

Making Your Job Pay

TRY TO BE ALWAYS LEARNING

Don't Be Content With Going Around in a Circle and Knowing Nothing but Your Own Routine

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

MOST of the mistakes and near-failures in business come from a lack of knowledge of every-day truths!

Some times we call the chap who is a perpetual question mark an "infernal bore." That is all wrong. "Why" is a mark of constructive curiosity—the desire to know.

When you catch yourself asking "Why," you have a right to look with approval on yourself, to pat yourself on the back. It is not your "ignorance" you betray; it is your intelligent thirst for knowledge that you show.

Down in your world of business you are surrounded by all sorts of jobs other than your own. Do you know anything about them? Do you ever wonder about them?

Cook Left Suddenly

The Yardsley cook left unexpectedly one Saturday night and Mr. Yardsley was very scornful of his wife because she could not get the Sunday dinner, and made his wife the laughing-stock of all their friends by his "killingly funny" description of their lonely meal in a hotel on Sunday and his supping on delicatessen fare for a week thereafter. The man in the foreign trade department of Yardsley's firm left suddenly a few weeks later. Yardsley was the New York man—his salary was $3,000 a year against the other man's $4,500. He was offered the job because he happened to be available. He had to decline because he knew absolutely nothing about work that had been managed from a desk next his own for three years! Do you see a certain parallel in the case of the Yardsleys?

Have you any idea why a certain filing system is in use in your offices? Do you know how the mail orders are taken care of? Not in your department? Well, neither was cooking in Mrs. Yardsley's. But things have a way of happening suddenly in this world!

Knowledge of branches foreign to your own is not part of your job. It may even seem none of your business. But knowledge such as this might bring you success. A few "whys" and you could acquire instruction in the circles that lie about your little centre of work.

Your own particular job becomes much more interesting when you know something about the other jobs that touch on it. Once upon a time I knew a little secretary to an author who stopped him at the end of every article to ask the meanings of words or phrases she had not quite grasped.

The first time she did it she apologized for taking up his time. he explained that he had gotten real inspiration from that fact that she was interested in what he was dictating and that he had aroused her curiosity. And she actually educated herself into a splendid government position by investigating every bit of work that went on around her.

A few honest requests for information are sure to please "the man higher up." He knows that you are wondering about your job, concentrating on it, thinking in terms of it, taking a real interest in it.

An honest desire to know pleases the man above you and brings you yourself real pleasure in what is no longer a meaningless, mechanical piece of routine—but is instead a chance to create.

Fun Out of Work

If your job is a routine one, you may look down on it, despise it, be bored by it, long for the 5 o'clock whistle.

The only way to get any fun out of your work is to investigate it. The minute you have learned to study yourself, your job, the job higher up, and your fellow workers in their relation to you and the business, you have done two splendid things: You have created for yourself a real interest for your work and you have made the people who have it in their power to advance you recognize that you are earnest — worth watching. You have taken the first step toward promotion.

Plant a War Garden

Under the impetus given by the National War Garden Commission the people of this country last year produced a crop valued at $350,000,000 in gardens cultivated in backyards, on vacant lots and on other land previously untilled—the patriotic gift of the war gardens of the nation. That this great production may be increased is the aim of the Commission. The series of articles herewith are authoritative and are sent out by the Commission.

Cut them out and save them and send them to the address at the bottom of each article for a primer.

Plant a war garden!

NOW that you have decided to have a garden you should at once make a window box and sow seeds of cabbage, cauliflower, collard, tomato, pepper, egg plant, celery and lettuce, if you want to grow these crops, and give them a very early start in the Spring.

From three to five weeks can be gained getting these crops ready for the table and planting the seeds outdoors.

To make a window box take strips about four inches wide and half or three-quarters inch thick for the sides and ends. Nail these together and nail a bottom to them; a good size is twelve to twenty-four inches long. This box can be easily handled.

Put in the box an inch of fine cinders or gravel and then fill it with fine rich compost of rich garden soil, with manure or rotting vegetable matter mixed in. Good potting soil for house plants or the rich soil below a decaying log is fine for this purpose. Press down the soil with a small piece of board to make it smooth and level.

You are ready now to sow the seeds. Mark out two rows two inches apart and one-fourth to one-half inch deep—one-fourth for very small seeds and one half for larger ones. Scatter the seeds in the row, using eight or ten to the inch. Cover with fine sand or rich soil and press down the soil again with the board.

Now water carefully, so there will be no leaking, and set the box in a warm place. It must be watered often enough to keep the ground slightly moist. If a piece of glass is laid over the box to hold in the moisture the soil will not need so much watering, and the plants will grow very rapidly. When the seeds begin to sprout set the box in a window in the sunshine.

When the plants are an inch or two high they should be thinned out to stand two inches apart, so they will grow stocky. Those thinned out may be planted two inches apart in other window boxes.

About two or three weeks before the plants may be transplanted to the garden set the box outdoors part of the day to harden them off, so they will be able to stand the cool nights without injury. Water the box well before the plants are taken out to make the earth stick to their roots in transplanting.

Now is the time to get busy. Write to the National War Garden Commission, 210 Maryland building, Washington, for a free garden primer and organization suggestions. You can get these by sending a 2-cent stamp for postage.

Unexplored Canada

It is believed that nearly 30 per cent of Canada is still undiscovered and if Indian reports are to be believed there is in the basin of the Mackenzie River one of the largest areas of possible oil-bearing country on the face of the earth. The Indians report the existence of lakes a hundred miles and more long in Yukon that no white man has ever seen, while even the Indians apparently know nothing of the apparently untrodden Mackenzie Mountains.

INJURED ON ELECTRIC CAR; SUES FOR $10,000

Salts in Hot Water Clears Pimply Skin

Says we must make kidneys clean the blood, and pimples disappear.

Pimples, sores and boils usually result from toxins, poisons and impurities which are generated in the bowels and then absorbed into the blood through the very ducts which should absorb only nourishment to sustain the body.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter impurities from the blood and cast them out in the form of urine, but in many instances the bowels create more toxins and impurities than the kidneys can eliminate, then the blood uses the skin pores as the next best means of getting rid of these impurities which often break out all over the skin in the form of pimples.

The surest way to clear the skin of these eruptions, says a noted authority, is to get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of hot water each morning before breakfast for one week. This will prevent the formation of toxins in the bowels. It also stimulates the kidneys to normal activity, thus coaxing them to filter the blood of impurities and clearing the skin of pimples.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent drink which usually makes pimples disappear; cleanses the blood and is excellent for the kidneys as well.—Advertisement.

Grandma Never Let Her Hair Get Gray

She Kept Her Locks Dark and Glossy, with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, and look years younger. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and not a medicine. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Advertisement.

Cocoanut Oil Fine for Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—Advertisement.

No Trouble to Remove Superfluous Hair

(Toilet Tips)

It is an easy matter to rid the skin of objectionable hair or fuzz, if you proceed as follows: Mix a paste with some water and a little powdered delatone, apply to hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method of banishing hairy growths is painless and does not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment be certain to get real delatone.—Advertisement.

ONE SON KILLED, GIVES ANOTHER THE SAME DAY

Mrs. Bayard Proud of Dedham Boy Who Lost Life, Now Fears for Youngest

By CONSTANCE WILLIAMS.

To learn in the morning that your son has made the greatest sacrifice that a man can make, and in the afternoon to say goodbye to another boy, not knowing when or if ever you will see him again; is that not a heroic thing for a woman to do?

And that is what Mrs. Robert Bayard of Dale street, Dedham, did yesterday. There is a service flag flying its three stars in the window of her little cottage. One of these stars will be changed to gold now, for her eldest son, for whom it stands, has given his life for his country; dying from wounds received on the battlefield in France, where he was fighting with the gallant 101st.

"I cannot talk about it yet," Mrs. Bayard told me. "You know as much as we do anyway, for we learned it first from the newspapers. I am proud of him though, proud that he volunteered his services; proud that he wanted to help fight for the things that this war means to us; and later, perhaps, I shall be proud that he died for his country. But not just yet."

HE WAS ONLY TWENTY-FOUR.

He was only twenty-four, the mother told me. She heard from him last Tuesday, a little note saying that he was going into the trenches and that he was glad of the opportunity and the "privilege" of being among those chosen to do what he had so long wanted to do. He said he was writing to his sister, but this letter has not come.

"That was his spirit," Mrs. Bayard went on to say. "He was glad to go into the trenches, and he considered it his privilege to die for the country. We must think of it as ours, to have lost him. But he was so young." Grief and pride in the heroism of her son struggled for the mastery as she looked through her tears at the service stars in her flag.

One of the other stars stands for a son-in-law, Harold C. Searle, who is chief electrician in the naval reserves. The third star is for her youngest son, Donald, who, still in his teens, is an artilleryman in the regular army. He was finishing a twenty days' leave at home yesterday, and the thought of his having to return to camp in Oklahoma last night, together with the fear that he might be ordered to France, was adding to the burden Mrs. Bayard had to bear.

"MY BABY STILL."

"He is my baby still," she told me. "I don't see how I can let him go. I don't like to be rebellious, but it is all so new to all of us." The tall boy put his arm around his mother, and she put her head on his shoulder as if seeking courage in his young strength.

"As a friend of mother told me," he said, "I can avenge my brother's death. I have his work to do, too, now. I can feel that he is still fighting beside me and I will have the strength of two."

"To avenge," his mother broke in. "That's what they all say. My other son wants to go over to avenge Robert's death. I will have to fight to keep him here at home, and to show him what his real duty is. He would have gone long ago had it not been for his two motherless little children. They need him now as much as ever, for they must not be left orphans.

"Donald and all the other boys who are fighting in France can avenge Robert's death, while they do the work they went over to do. But the children have their future."

A look at the two little tots, barely old enough to know their own names, and playing with a childish disregard for sorrow, showed me what she meant. And as I left them smiling through their tears, I thought that perhaps the little ones would help to soften their grief.

WILLIAM RECHTOR SUES "L" FOR AUTO INJURIES

JEWS BOOM DRIVE FOR THIRD LIBERTY BOND

The first note in the third Liberty Loan campaign to be conducted among the Jewish residents of Massachusetts was sounded at a conference of fifty well-known Jewish men and women at the Elysium Club, No. 218 Huntington avenue. Mayor Peters, Alexander Whiteside of the New England Liberty Loan Committee and other officials were present.

Mr. Whiteside emphasized the importance of the work which the Jewish people had undertaken and stated that he had no doubt their organization would be a model for future action. He introduced Max Mitchell as one who had studied the proposed campaign and was prepared to present a definite plan. Mayor Peters spokeof the necessity of co-operation by all elements to put the third Liberty Loan campaign "over the top."

BEST FOR LIVER, BOWELS, STOMACH, HEADACHE, COLDS

To-night sure! Take Cascarets and enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced. Wake up with your head clear, stomach sweet, breath right and feeling fine. Get rid of sick headache, biliousness, constipation, furred tongue, sour stomach, bad colds. Clear your skin, brighten your eyes, quicken your step and feel like doing a full day's work. Cascarets are better than salts, pills or calomel because they don't shock the liver or gripe the bowels or cause inconveniences all the next day.

Mothers should give cross, sick, bilious, feverish children a whole Cascaret anytime as they can not injure the thirty feet of tender bowels.

ARMY AND NAVY AMERICAN

DEMOCRACY BOSTON, TUESDAY MARCH 5, 1918 LIBERTY

TO MUFFLE PIER THEATRE APPLAUSE

Lieut. F. G. Carlton to Stop Cat-Calling, Feet Stamping at 'Seaside'

By PAUL WHELTON.

Aboard the Receiving Ship, Commonwealth Pier, March 5.—Entertainments held hereafter in the "Seaside Theatre" aboard the "Immobile," are to be raised to the De Luxe variety by Lieutenant F. G. Carlton, executive officer of this most languid craft. The much-practiced and heretofore countenanced stamping of feet, whistling and other excessively noisy methods of displaying approbation following any act or bit during an entertainment is to be frowned on by the genial lieutenant, who believes that the old-fashioned method of bumping each hand against its mate serves equally well in conveying the observer's hearty approval of any "turn."

In advices to division officers aboard ship Lieutenant Carlton states that in future anyone who interrupts or disturbs an entertainment by vulgar talk of any sort, whistling, stamping of the feet, or who applauds otherwise than with his hands, will be put on report.

It shall be the duty of all chief petty officers and petty officers, in such instances, to put the man on report immediately. If there is a chief petty officer or petty officer present when such disturbances are created and the officer fails to place the men on report, the officer himself will have his name placed on report.

Lieutenant Carlton believe that if a man can conduct himself like a "select audience" while in an outside theatre, he can do the same in "Seaside," especially as there are no armless men in the navy.

RETURNS TO ARMY AFTER 9 YEARS

Top Sergeant Louis Gordon Expert Horseman at Devens

By William Flynn.

Camp Devens, Ayer, March 5.—After nearly nine years' absence, Louis Gordon is back in the Army and rated as one of the best horsemen in the 76th Division. During the past five seasons as head of the mounted police at Bretton Woods, N. H., Gordon electrified the Summer visitors at that resort with his daring feats of horsemanship, and he is doing the same thing here at the camp.

Gordon is top Sergeant of B Company of the military police. For nine years he was a member of G Troop, 11th U. S. Cavalry, of which Colonel Frank P. Tompkins of "Boston's Own" was captain. When he first came to camp he was given charge of a squad of "rookies." Colonel Tompkins recognized his voice as he was giving commands to his charges, and they had a reunion.

Gordon's ability has been a valuable asset to the division, and he's working hard to build the military police into one of the best units of its kind in the Army. In addition to his cavalry experience, Gordon was a member of the Pennsylvania State Police, and has been in the saddle since he was fifteen years old.

Sergeant Raymond Stinson of C Company, 302nd Machine Gun Battalion, during the six months he has been a soldier has made $11,000 in the stock market. This is more than General Pershing gets in salary for a year. Stinson, who comes from Amesbury, expects to be transferred to the baloon pilots' school at Omaha, Neb.

An order has been sent out through the division warning all officers and men to be extremely careful when handling loaded guns, live grenades or other dangerous weapons. This was done to minimize the danger of accidents in the intensive training of the various units, which will be rushed abroad as soon as the weather permits. Another order was also issued prohibiting enlisted men from loitering in the town of Ayer. The military police have been instructed to send all loiterers back to camp.

EDITORIAL

The liquor menace has been reduced to a minimum at Camp Devens and a great part of the credit is due to the wholehearted co-operation of the rank and file of the cantonment.

Cases of intoxication in the 76th Division are exceedingly rare, and the Military Police have effectively prevented the smuggling of intoxicating liquor into the camp. The relentless activity of the Military authorities and the State Police have abolished bootlegging and short shrift is shown anyone who attempts to deny the regulations.

The guards at the gates do their work thoroughly and the men in the cantonment have come to respect them. Only one bottle of whiskey was secured by the Military Police over the week-end. This is a remarkable record for any army cantonment and is an admirable example of the high character of the personnel of the 76th Division.

NEW DRAFTEES BEST AYER "ROOKIES"

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, March 5.—The men sent here in the last draft quota are being whipped into shape faster than any other "rookie" outfit that has come to this cantonment. The decks had been cleared for action long before the men were due to arrive and no time was lost in starting them on their preliminary training.

Despite the fact the parade grounds of the Depot Brigade are covered with ice and snow the drilling of the new men in the fundamentals of military formations and manoeuvres are being pushed at top speed. The non-commissioned officers and first-class privates of the Depot Brigade are proving a big help to the officers in charge of the new men and the camp roads, company streets and drill grounds swarm with marching squads of embryo soldiers daily. Most of the new men have received their uniforms and the rest are expected to be outfitted within a day or so.

The boys of the 5th Battalion, Depot Brigade, carried off the honors in the trench mortar examinations given by Captain J. E. L. Warren of the British army who has charge of the trench mortar instruction at the cantonment. They secured a rating of 95 per cent. which military authorities consider a remarkable showing. Privates Nilson and Clements received marks of 99.44 per cent. and four others reached the 99 per cent. mark.

The men in the Automatic Rifle School are making rapid progress under the expert direction of Lieutenant H. P. Richards and Lieutenant G. Bognon of the French army and their assistants, and before long are expected to be sent out to the range to indulge in actual firing. The men are receiving careful instructions in the proper things to do when any members of a gun crew is killed or wounded during a battle. It is interesting work and the men are enjoying the novelty of it.

Fair Comment by Transcript on the "L" Situation

It is not often that the AMERICAN finds itself able to approve of any editorial position which the Boston Transcript takes, but the comment which the Transcript made upon the suggestion that the contract between the State and the Elevated concerning the 5-cent fare be abrogated IMMEDIATELY, and that the Elevated be allowed to charge a higher fare with the consent of the Public Service Commission before the well matured plan of the Public Service Commission for a PERMANENT solution of the street railway problem in the Metropolitan District is considered, is so fair and sound that the AMERICAN is glad to quote it with approval.

The Transcript says in part:

> Taken as an urgent summons, the Governor's message need in no way be challenged. There is an expediency which must be considered, however, even in making response to a hurry-up call for the doctor. The right treatment must be determined upon, and if it is not, there will be little gained.
> Governor McCall recommends that the Public Service Commission be granted at once "the power to fix just, reasonable and equal rates of fare upon the Boston Elevated Railway," without any further regard for existing provisions of law which now automatically holds its fare at five cents and no more. So far as his purpose is concerned in this recommendation, there can be no objection. But what shall be said of the very carefully prepared legislation which is already before a committee of the General Court, looking to the remedy of the Elevated's condition, and which has behind it the combined weight and mature thought of two special recess commissions and of a report issued in February by the Public Service Commission itself, not to mention numerous other studies and treatises which have all shaped up to but one majority conclusion?
> The Governor says his recommendation can be pursued "without prejudice to any of the propositions which the Legislature is now considering." Can it? Can a hasty plan of action, providing no clear guarantee as to the items of cost which are to be included in the determination of rates, be set into motion a few days before we come to grips with a mature and well-considered plan of action and still not do the situation harm? In any event it will save time to do so, some may say.
> Yet is there anyone who expects the Public Service Commission would attempt to fix a new schedule of rates in the manner suggested in any less time than it will take the General Court to deliberate and decide upon the fully developed proposals already before it? The commission could not if it would. And when it had brought in its schedule, dealing with the matter as a war emergency, as the Governor apparently assumes it to be, the limited authority so allowed the commission probably would not contribute anything toward that permanency of the road's credit which the service-at-cost plan is so carefully designed to secure.
> It must be only a makeshift, diverting attention from the real necessities at stake, and not taking into account a financial condition which, beginning long before America entered the war, will remain long after the war is done, unless it is dealt with in far-sighted fashion.

Here Is an Enthusiast

Daylight Saving Is Necessary. Some Like Him Will Find It Pleasant

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

> Dear Sir—Tell us, please, about the "daylight-saving" movement, new up to the United States as a war-time measure, at least. Examine the evidence given before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, printed in S. Doc. 1854. Urge the adoption of the plan. Educate the people to believe in it. Show them its many industrial and healthful advantages. You can do it. Think of getting out in the open at 4.30 p. m. (clock time) when it is only 3.30 p. m. (sun time)! Gee! What good will come to a in that hour! And then to be out of bed at 6 a. m. (clock time) on rare Summer days when it is only 5 a. m. (sun time)! Joy!

Some of the advantages of the daylight saving plan, the SPIRITUAL advantages, are outlined in this letter.

An extra hour's freedom in the afternoon when the sun is shining will be thought worth while by the worth while kind of people.

Getting up early in the morning, after going early to bed, will also be worth while for the right kind.

In addition, there will be the saving of coal, gas and electric light. And for those that want to get to work early in order to achieve success and conquer life's problem before they are too old to enjoy leisure, the whole world working system will be much improved.

At present the man working in the early hours finds himself lonesome—he must wait for the others to get up before any business can be done.

The daylight saving proposition should, of course, be adopted at once. As we understand it, only the electric and gas-light companies fight against it.

Letter to the Editor

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

You have done so much through the editorials in your paper, it seems to me you might do something in regard to having the State keep its agreement with the volunteer soldiers. They were given to understand they would receive $10 a month until the war terminated, and the State should not break its agreement with the boys who are sacrificing so much. The bounty should be paid if it takes the last dollar in the treasury.

How many volunteers gave up good positions to serve their country at the first call issued by the Boston AMERICAN last Spring? Do the people of the State realize their financial losses?

I know of a case where a young man gave up a position bringing in one hundred dollars a month. Had he waited for the draft he would still be drawing salary.

What I wish you would make clear is that when these young men sacrificed so much the least the State can do is to hold to its agreement. I think every man in the service should receive the bounty. It is no excuse to say other States do not pay a bounty. I hope this State will see its way clear to meet its obligation to the boys who willingly give everything to serve America in this great conflict.

Let Massachusetts be just in all things and show to other States she is doing one great thing to make the boys happy and contented and they will do their part and give a good account of themselves "over there."

THE CASE OF LUXEMBOURG

Interesting History of a Small Country Struggling for Life—Not Too Successfully. But There Is Bound to Be Another, More Serious Fight with Germany

By H. Gernsback

Editor of the Electrical Experimenter

IF this is the age of the small country, for which President Wilson stands sponsor, the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg assuredly is entitled to more than a passing interest. There certainly is no doubt as to the smallness of this little principality, best attested by the fact that for the past six hundred years it has been lost habitually in the shuffle whenever Europe took to one of its chronic attacks of indigestion.

The writer, who was born in the city of Luxembourg, where he was educated and where he spent the better part of his youth, believes that he can speak with authority on a subject which he is certain will be of more or less interest at this time.

So small, in fact, is Luxembourg that the average American, and even the average European, invariably takes it for granted that the grand duchy belongs to Germany.

Before proceeding let us therefore brush up a bit on our history as well as geography. The Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, now reigned over by Grand Duchess Adelaide, is a constitutional monarchy. Luxembourg has been the bone of contention of the European powers since the days of the Roman Empire. It has belonged to the Romans as well as to the Holy Roman Empire of the Germans. It then fell to Burgundy, after which Spain took it, only to lose it to Austria.

Some History

In 1797 it was ceded to France, its status then being a duchy. Subsequently it was tossed over to Holland after losing half its territory, in consideration of which it was elevated to the honor of a grand duchy. The other half of it forms today the Belgian Province of Luxembourg. In 1867, by the Treaty of London, to which all the powers were signatories—Prussia included—the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg was made a neutral sovereign state, under a guarantee of the powers. This little toy country—about the size of the State of Rhode Island—forms a "buffer" between western and southern Germany, northern France and eastern Belgium, its shape being somewhat triangular. Population about 300,000. The capital is Luxembourg, before 1872 called "the northern Gibraltar," due to its impregnable fortifications, razed in 1872 by consent of the powers.

German Insults

For a generation back Germany has cast covetous glances at the little country—no doubt on the principle that "He who does not honor the pfennig is unworthy of the thaler."

Back in 1870, during the Franco-Prussian war, Germany had a logical reason for invading Luxembourg, but Bismarck was Chancellor then, not Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Knight of the "Scrap of Paper." Bismarck knew the value of a treaty, and he also knew that invading Luxembourg would raise a big rumpus over in London and elsewhere, so he desisted. Not that there wasn't a casus belli. There was a perfectly good one. During the war Luxembourg foolishly allowed the French to transport some war stores and men across the southern part of Luxembourg. Of course Bismarck found it out and sent several sizzling telegrams to the Luxembourg government. This effectively stopped the French traffic.

No doubt the present German powers that be remembered the incident. Trust German thoroughness for that. So one nice Summer morning—to be correct, August 2, 1914—several carloads of German troops and officers detrained and "pussyfooted" their way into the city. Not a shot was fired. Why should there be? Grand Duchess Adelaide in her auto on the Pont Adolphe blocked the way of the advancing columns, protesting in vain in the name of her people and her treaty.

Prussian Way

Can you not see the good-natured, leering smile of these Prussian officers as they pushed by the Grand Duchess' auto on their way to the postoffice, which they captured gloriously, including telephones and telegraph?

It was the first grand German victory of the war! As imposing a deed as stealing the pennies off a dead man's eyes, not to forget his shoes. The Luxembourg "scrap of paper" was the first one to be scrapped, but the Belgium one—the second one—proved to be a bigger scrap.

But what galls the people most is the confiscation of their industries, particularly their largest one, iron. And here is the reason which prompted this article.

Very little news has leaked out of Luxembourg since the war; the Germans themselves never mentioned it under any circumstances. The less said the better. No doubt the Luxembourgeois are treated well during the war, as well as is possible during the war, for the Germans mean to keep the little country, small in area but rich, rich particularly in ores. So they keep mum, trusting to luck that when they sit at the green table in the near future the representatives of the powers will have so many other headaches that Luxembourg—as was the invariable and time-honored custom in the past—could not be remembered even with the aid of a microscope!

The Strangle Hold

And if Germany can be made to give up Alsace-Lorraine, for what good reason should she not retain Luxembourg? And if she won't give up the former, she'll surely hand back Belgium, and for being such a good old girl, why, of course, we will let her have Luxembourg! To be sure, not all of it. But here dear old Germania raises an awful bawl and becomes hysteric, yelling that there "ain't going to be no core," which, by the way, is a subtle little Teutonic joke all of her own. You see, she is the sole and original girl who took the ore out of core, the core in this case being Luxembourg.

Yes, sir, for three years she has done it, quietly and noiselessly, and, if I know her at all, she will throw herself on the floor and kick and scratch and bite and raise all kinds of dust before you will get it away from her.

DO TOMORROW'S WORK TOMORROW

Get rid of that frown—and smile.

You are worrying too much over affairs of tomorrow, which on the morrow, in the light of today, will seem but trifles to you.

Before this day is gone you may have the confidence of experience for tomorrow.

Iron out the worry lines and smile—relax as if to smile and you will find yourself actually smiling.

Have you not had more exacting situations than those of tomorrow?

Have you not had harder problems than those which may confront you this week?

There is no telling what you can do if you put your whole mind and attention on the problem at hand.

Gain knowledge, practice and experience, all you can and concentrate on whatever you do today, then when tomorrow comes, you will be in line to do tomorrow's work with some fair chance of success.

Mr. Quincy and Proposed "Emergency" Law

Josiah Quincy and others appeared before the Legislative Committee last week to advocate legislation that cities and towns should undertake to provide their citizens with the necessities of life in cases of emergency.

It will be recalled that by a process of most extraordinary reasoning a majority of our Supreme Court, some twenty-five years ago, having conceived the idea that it was politically and economically wrong anyway, held that cities and towns might not supply the necessaries of life to their citizens, even in great emergencies like the coal strike and our present coal situation.

The Constitutional Convention, however, submitted, at this last election, to the people an amendment which provides that the cities and towns MAY in emergencies do what the Supreme Court said they could not do.

It is especially interesting to note that Mr. Quincy represents Mayor Peters in favor of this legislation.

It is a very good beginning of the Mayor at the State House. Far too long has the influence of the city officials been thrown against progressive measures at the State House.

Mr. Quincy makes a very interesting contribution to the discussion concerning the nature of the proposed law, which is as follows:

> In connection with the question of the character of legislation which should be enacted by the present Legislature under the authority of Article 47 of the Amendments to the Constitution adopted by the people at the last State election by an overwhelming majority, it is important to take note of the exact language of the amendment, which reads as follows:
> > The maintenance and distribution at reasonable rates, during time of war, public exigency, emergency or distress, of a sufficient supply of food and other common necessaries of life and the providing of shelter, are public functions, and the commonwealth and the cities and towns therein may take and may provide the same for their inhabitants in such manner as the General Court shall determine.
> It is highly significant that the language of this amendment does not leave it to the discretion of the Legislature to determine, IF IT SEES FIT TO DO SO, that the maintenance and distribution of food and other common necessaries of life in times of emergency MAY be treated as public functions, the performance of which may in the wisdom of the Legislature be entrusted in whole or in part to municipalities. The first clause of the amendment closes all debate upon the question whether or not service of the above-named character is such as may be performed by public authorities at public expense.
> The amendment does not say that the distribution of food and fuel MAY in the discretion of the Legislature be declared to be public functions; it settles the question once for all that in times of emergency such action IS a public function, and therefore cannot be declared by the courts to be beyond municipal powers, or to be improper objects for the expenditure of the money of the tax-payers. The people by their overwhelming ratification of this amendment have declared their will that the purchase and distribution of the necessities of life in time of emergency shall be regarded as a proper field for the exercise of public authority; and as the amendment received a large majority of the votes cast in nearly all of the municipalities of the State, there would seem to be no further justification for any local referendum upon the question whether such additional services as the amendment indicates constitute functions proper and desirable for municipalities to undertake.
> The first clause of the amendment stands by itself and is independent and conclusive upon the question of principle; the second clause of the amendment merely authorizes the Legislature to determine the MANNER in which these new public functions may be exercised by the Commonwealth itself and by its municipalities. If this situation is fully grasped it greatly reduces the difficulties in the way of formulating legislation. Various conflicting measures, some confined to coal and some embracing other necessities of life, are before the Committee upon Social Service. If the Legislature undertakes to set up or to prescribe elaborate machinery, or forms of organization, to which every municipality must conform it will result in unnecessary delay and in obstructing the carrying out of the true spirit and intent of the amendment. It goes without saying that upon grounds of local self-government cities and towns should be given the largest discretion as to METHODS of dealing with local problems.
> While the problems of production and transportation are beyond municipal authority or control, the problem of maintaining within local reach a sufficient supply of necessities of life, and of providing for their distribution at reasonable rates, is emphatically a local problem; and conditions are so radically different in different municipalities that it would be a mistake to prescribe any hard and fast machinery. There surely cannot be any substantial objection to giving the municipalities of the State, in the simplest and most general form possible, exactly those new powers which the Constitutional Convention and the people decided by overwhelming majorities that they should be endowed with to meet such times of emergency as now exist.
> There is just one principle which the Legislature may profitably embody in an enabling act. In the interest of the intelligent and efficient exercise of the new functions and powers which the conditions of the times imperatively require that our local governments should assume, it is highly desirable to draw the line between distribution of necessities upon a BUSINESS basis, and distribution upon a CHARITABLE basis. All municipalities distribute water, and a great many municipalities distribute light and heat, upon a business basis, under which the full cost of the service is intended to be charged to the citizen who receives such service, and under which there is no element of public dole, gratuity or charity involved. Of course there are many cases in which municipalities are obliged to assist families by providing them with some of the necessities of life; but this is done under the charitable function, as a part of necessary public relief, and not as any part of the ditributive service of municipalities, which should be maintained as nearly as possible upon a business—that is, upon a self-supporting—basis.
> It would therefore seem to be desirable that an act to carry out the purpose of the Forty-Seventh Amendment should contain a provision that the necessities of life distributed by municipalities in times of emergency should be charged for at such rates as to cover the total cost of the service as nearly as may be; and in order to have this intention properly carried out it would seem to be wise to provide further that the forms of accounts under which all such new functions should be administered should be prescribed by the State Bureau of Statistics. This bureau has done admirable work already in the field of municipal accounting, and as a result the municipalities of this State are keeping their accounts today upon a sounder business basis than the municipalities of almost any other State. This is particularly desirable from the standpoint of making it possible to extend municipal functions into new fields as fast as occasion may arise. The public is entitled to know the exact financial results of such new municipal activities, and these cannot be hidden or disguised, if the total cost has to be charged to the consumer, so far as possible of calculation, and this will powerfully tend to discourage what may be called political overhead charges.
> It is to be hoped that the city of Boston under the present municipal administration, as the largest and in many respects the best organized of the cities of the Commonwealth, will be able to make such a business showing, in the performance of the new functions which will devolve upon it to meet the emergencies of the times and under the authority of the Forty-Seventh Amendment to the Constitution, that those who distrust the ability of public authorities to carry out any public work upon a basis of business efficiency will be fully reassured.
> The experience of the Federal Fuel Administration in Boston this year is enough to prove that even if all necessary costs are charged to the consumer it is still possible to perform a service of great value, if not even of vital necessity, to large numbers of our citizens, particularly those who through having to purchase coal in small lots from hand to mouth are peculiarly exposed to the extortions of unscrupulous retailers or pedlers.

We most heartily agree with Mr. Quincy.
